Ontario turnaround lifts Trudeau to power; NDP, Socreds cut back

Liberals regain their majority

Capital area: Tories pile big margins

The New Democrats lost one seat on Vancouver Island in Monday's general election and saw their majority greatly reduced in another.

T. C. (Tommy) Douglas beat back a strong Tory challenge to hold on to his Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding and become one of Vancouver Island's three incumbent MPs to be returned. But his majority was cut from 15,304 to 2,345 when 305 of 311 polls had been counted.

The others returned were Allan McKinnon, who easily held Victoria for the Conservatives, and Donald Munro, who was again returned as Conservative member for Esquimalt-Saanich.

The NDP loss came in Comox-Alberni which had been held for 17 of the past 22 years by Tom Barnett, who did not run again.

Liberal Hugh Anderson was leading with 13,547 votes with 300 polls out of 306 reporting. In second place with 12,544 votes was Conservative Alan Lazerte.

The NDP candidate, Donald Barker, ran third with 11,133 votes, and in last place was Communist Mark Mosher with 603. Earlier in the night the lead had gone back and forth between Anderson and Lazerte as various polls reported and at times it was reminiscent of the 1968 election when the Liberals won the seat by nine votes. However, Anderson finally went ahead in convincing numbers.

Anderson was elated by the result. In the 1972 election the Liberals had polled about 9,000 votes compared with about 17,000 for the NDP.

He said his showing proved the Liberal party "is far from being in the doldrums in this province that some people think it is."

In Victoria riding there was never any doubt about the result and Liberal challenger Frances Elford conceded defeat within an hour after polls closed at 8 p.m.

Final unofficial result showed McKinnon with 26,781 votes, a majority of 12,483 over Elford. He won the seat

Lewis loses House seat

TORONTO — Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal party won the wars on the Ontario battlefield in Monday's general election and captured a majority government — a goal he desperately wanted.

Conservative ranks were badly shaken, and the New Democrats not only lost their leader, but about one-half their troops.

The revival of the Liberals in Ontario surprised many observers who had been predicting a neck-and-neck race in the traditional battleground. The Liberals had won 19 more Ontario seats than in October, 1972, bringing their provincial total to 55. Both the Conservatives and New Democrats suffered losses there.

The trend was apparent even before Ontario returns came in.

Then, as expected, they swept through their traditional fortress of Quebec and had enough seats to see them through the relatively Liberal-barren Prairies.

In British Columbia, where the New Democrats were being hammered by the voters, the Liberals got their majority.

The setback for the Conservatives and New Democrats sparked immediate speculation about the future of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, who now has led the party into three general elections. He came within an inch of the prime ministership in 1972 but after Monday's losses, he is almost certain to review his leadership.

He would not comment on that possibility.

"I will have to talk with officials of the caucus and leaders of the party," he said after learning the results.

The defeat of the 65-year-old Lewis might end his career in Parliament, which he first entered in 1963 after four unsuccessful attempts. But he said Monday night he would continue to fight for democratic socialism "so long as there's breath in me."

When the Liberal victory became apparent, Trudeau went before television cameras in Ottawa, thanked the people for bolstering his party, and promised that all his government's actions would be for the good of all regions. For the third time following a general election, he had to express disappointment about the low representation of Liberals from the Prairies.

Grits, Tories both gain

B.C. wallops NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party fell to a shattering defeat in B.C. in Monday's federal election as the Conservatives and Liberals each picked up seats.

With counting still proceeding, the Conservatives had won 13 of B.C.'s 23 seats, with the Liberals elected in seven seats. The NDP had only two candidates elected, one in Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands, where former national NDP leader Tommy Douglas won again.

The Conservatives won eight seats in 1972, while the Liberals won four in that election. The NDP led all parties in B.C. in 1972 with 11 victories.

Davis
. . . major defeat

Davis fell behind Conservative businessman Ron Huntington early in the counting and never picked up ground. The loss didn't come as a complete surprise, with political observers suggesting he was in trouble in the riding.

The Liberals brought in heavy firepower, with Prime Minister Trudeau and wife Margaret both addressing rallies in the affluent constituency. Davis had represented the riding since 1962 and in 1968, won by more than 20,000 votes, the largest plurality rolled up by any candidate in the country.

It was national NDP leader David Lewis who first raised the spectre of the NDP losing seats in B.C. because of the policies of Barrett's government and, no matter what the cause, it was obvious that the NDP was losing many seats.

One indicator was Vancouver East, the lunchpail riding which has never elected anyone except an NDP or CCF member in its history.

There, trade unionst Paddy Neale fell behind early to Liberal Art Lee, who hadn't even planned to run until drafted in desperation by the Liberals.

'Strong nation in unsure era'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday that Canada has elected a strong government in an uncertain world.

"Canada has come out of this election strong and confident in its future," the prime minister said.

"I'm very anxious to get on with the job."

The prime minister praised the election efforts of the three main opposition parties and expressed regret that David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, will not be in the new Parliament.

"Mr. Stanfield had a difficult task," he said referring to the Progressive Conservative leader's policy on income and price controls.

"He was putting a difficult proposition before the Canadian people and I admire his courage in having sustained that fight during two long months."

He said he was sorry so many good people had lost.

Referring to the poor Liberal showing in the western provinces the prime minister said that he renews his pledge that federal policies will be applied fairly in the West.

Tory leadership 'not yet an issue'

HALIFAX (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Monday he does not want to talk at present about whether he will stay on as leader of the Progressive Conservative party.

Stanfield looked glum and spoke in hushed tones to reporters at his campaign headquarters here after hearing the Liberal party was on its way to forming a majority government.

"I will have to talk with officials of the caucus and leaders of the party," he said when asked if he would stay on as leader.

But that's politics, says morose Lewis

UPI, CP

TORONTO — New Democratic Party leader David Lewis, whose party held the balance of power in the last parliament, went down to defeat in his home riding Monday at the hands of a political unknown.

Lewis could either resign, stay on as non-parliamentary leader or run for a seat vacated by another NDP member.

"I'm naturally disappointed . . . but that's what politics is about," he told reporters and supporters after it was clear he had been beaten.

Asked by reporters if he would take another member's seat, Lewis replied, "I will obviously have to consider it." As far as the party leadership was concerned, he said, "My own inclination is to say let someone else take it."

Lewis, who has worked for democratic socialism in and out of parliament for 40 years, was defeated in the Toronto riding of York South by Liberal Ursula Appolloni. She is a political newcomer who was not given much of a chance against the NDP leader, but was declared winner 50 minutes after the polls had closed.

Rejected by boss, Moncton man wins

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI) — Controversial Moncton Mayor Leonard Jones, who was rejected as a candidate by the Progressive Conservative party due to his anti-bilingualism stand, was elected to parliament Monday as an independent candidate.

Jones, who originally won the Conservative nomination in the riding of Moncton, was dumped as the party candidate by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

As mayor of Moncton, Jones had taken a strong stand against bilingualism, a move which won considerable support from anglophones in the area.

Prominent Personalities

Glorious past no guarantee for bright political future

Former cabinet ministers trying for a come-back went down to defeat in Monday's election; newspaper and television men, never having been short of exposure, were clobbered.

Being the grandson of a former prime minister wasn't any help and having been premier of Manitoba wasn't considered a qualification to become an MP by the voters.

Among the prominents who went down to defeat Monday was Michael Meighen, president of the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada and grandson of former Prime Minister Arthur Meighen.

Meighen was defeated by C. M. (Bud) Drury, president of the treasury board, who took the Montreal-Westmount riding for the sixth straight time.

Duff Roblin, former Conservative Premier of Manitoba, couldn't overcome his carpet-bagger stigma and was beaten by the incumbent Liberal Hugh Faulkner, secretary of state, who was re-elected in Peterborough, Ont.

Ron Brewer, a former Canadian Football League player, ran for the Conservatives in Hamilton East and was defeated by Labor Minister John Munro.

It appears that the scandal which followed Munro's admission last week that political patronage was a fact of life didn't hurt his chances for re-election.

It was a bad night for members of the Fourth Estate in the east.

Conservative incumbent Peter Reilly was defeated in Ottawa West by Liberal Lloyd Francis, the MP Reilly defeated in 1972. Reilly became somewhat of a national celebrity years ago for his participation in the CBC public affairs program This Hour Has Seven Days.

Ron Collister, former CBC parliamentary reporter, was defeated in the Toronto riding of York-Scarborough. Collister, who ran for the Conservatives, was beaten by Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury.

Lincoln Alexander, Conservative manpower and immigration critic, was re-elected in Hamilton East. Alexander is the only Negro in the House of Commons.

In Winnipeg North Centre, veteran MP Stanley Knowles, 66, long-time house whip for the NDP and expert on parliamentary procedure, was re-elected. He has held the seat since 1945 with the exception of four years.

Martin O'Connell, a former federal labor minister was re-elected in Toronto Scarborough East after being defeated in 1972 by a Conservative.

Simma Holt, Vancouver Sun columnist, was elected for the liberals in Vancouver Kingsway in her first bid for political office.

Rev. Andy Hogan was elected in Cape Breton-East Richmond to become the first Roman Catholic priest ever elected to the House of Commons and the first third-party candidate elected to the Commons from the Atlantic provinces since 1962.

Leonard Jones, a former mayor, was elected as an independent in Moncton after being rejected as a candidate by the Progressive Conservative party, defeating four other candidates.

Allan MacEachen, Privy Council president, and Liberal House leader, was re-elected in Cape Breton Highlands-Canso.

John Lundrigan, the PC member for Gander-Twillingate in the last house, was defeated in Bonavista-Trinity-Conception by Liberal David Rooney.

Ontario swung key votes in Grit sweep

By DOUG SMALL

TORONTO (CP) — Most of what Ontario took from Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals in the election of 1972, it returned Monday, setting up a return to majority government.

Liberals easily captured the bulk of the province's 88 seats in the general election, as they did in 1968, and once again cut into what was traditional Progressive Conservative support.

Voters returned all 10 of Trudeau's cabinet ministers from Ontario.

In the 1972 election, the province delivered what was considered the crucial blow to Liberal chances for a majority win.

Party strategists had agreed before the election that the province would be the key to the election, and all major parties predicted gains.

He was beaten by Liberal Ursula Appolloni, a former broadcaster.

Ontario Premier William Davis, a Conservative, said:

"I'm very disappointed. I think Mr. Stanfield did all any person could do to suggest solutions to the present problems."

Tory team spirit doesn't look defeated

Prominent father and daughter watch election returns on television Monday evening. Despite defeat, Conservative party leader Robert Stanfield was smiling along with daughter Mimi, who had given enthusiastic support all during short but exhausting campaign.

Tories sweep Alberta

Prairies tell Grits no

EDMONTON (CP) — While much of Canada gave a resounding "yes" to Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals in Monday's federal general election, the Prairies, as usual, said "no."

The Conservatives swept Alberta, just as they did in 1972, grabbing all 19 seats without much trouble.

They captured nine of Manitoba's 13 seats, a gain of one from the last election. The Liberals maintained their two seats while the New Democratic Party's representation dropped to two from three.

In Saskatchewan, the Conservatives won eight seats, one more than in 1972, while the NDP dropped to two from five.

The only Saskatchewan Liberals to win were Justice Minister Otto Lang in Saskatoon-Humboldt and Lang's former assistant, Ralph Goodale in Assiniboia.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker had no trouble winning re-election in Prince Albert. It was the 12th time Saskatchewan voters have sent him to the commons.

There were fewer than a handful of changes from 1972 in seats across the Prairies and none of these came as any great surprise.

In the Manitoba riding of Selkirk, persistent campaigner Dean Whiteway, who lost by 30 votes in 1972, won for the Conservatives against incumbent Doug Rowland of the NDP.

But there was no change in Alberta or the Northwest Territories.

Marcel Lambert, former speaker of the commons, won easy re-election in Edmonton West. Cattleman Bert Hargrave retained Medicine Hat against H. A. (Bud) Olson, former agriculture minister, who lost his seat in 1972.

Oilmen hope Grits will ease tax bill

CALGARY (CP) — Oil industry spokesmen said Monday night they hope the Liberal government will modify proposals which would increase the industry's tax bill by about $410 million annually.

Maurice Paulson, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, summed up the common viewpoint when he said:

"I hope there will be amendments to the May budget proposals. I think they (the Liberals) realize more money has to be spent on exploration."

The minority Liberal government was defeated in May over its budget, which included a provision to remove the federal tax-exempt status the oil industry enjoys on royalties — taxes on production — paid to provincial government.

A number of major petroleum companies cut back on exploration at the time, claiming the proposed changes would reduce the profit margin needed to continue exploring for new energy supplies.

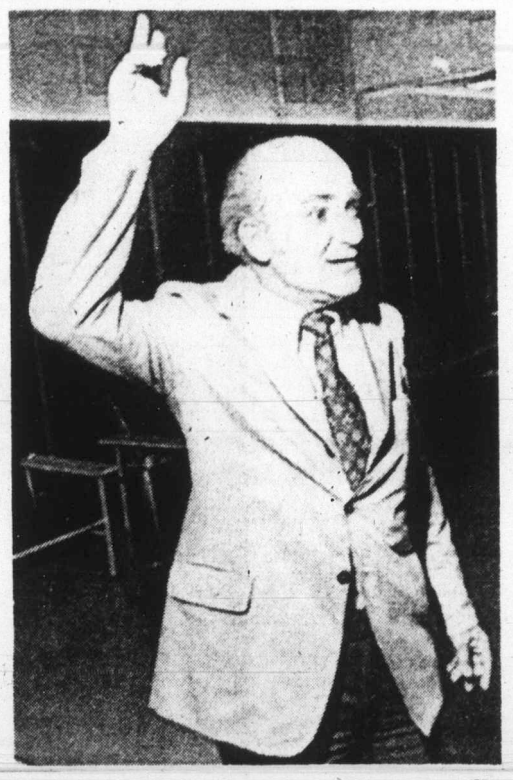

Prior to the electon, Finance Minister John Turner said the budget proposals would be reintroduced if the Liberals were re-elected, as they were Monday.

John Poyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said he thinks it is in Canada's best interests to have a majority government.

"I am concerned with the treatment of the oil industry by the Liberal government, whose May budget had very damaging consequences," said Poyen. "I hope some of the budget proposals will be revamped and certain changes will be made to allow oil companies to make a fair level of profit."

Arne Neilsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., said he thinks some of the differences between the industry and Ottawa "will be ironed out" now that a majoritty government has been elected.

What, who, me?

Most startled politician in Canada must have been Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier in Montreal when latest results were given to him. That's a victory sign he's trying to give.

Hare wins race

HALIFAX (UPI) — In the end, the hare won in the race with the tortoise, and Conservative leader Robert Stanfield became a three-time loser.

In the final days of the campaign, Conservative strategists had compared it to the nursery tale race between the hare and the tortoise, with Stanfield in the role of the slow-starting but strong-finishing tortoise.

But with his party's failure to unseat the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau, the 60-year-old Stanfield not only lost his bid to govern the land, he probably also lost his party.

Conservatives said they knew the game was lost when Ontario turned against the Tories and backed the Liberals.

Stanfield felt part of the Ontario losses might have stemmed from voters wanting a majority government. "Perhaps they felt that with their strong base in Quebec, the Liberals had the best chance of forming a majority."

Another factor in the Ontario losses, he felt, was the tough campaign waged by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan in southern Ontario.

He also credited Trudeau for a vigorous personal campaign in the country generally.

He said he did not believe his party's defeat could be interpreted as a rejection of the wage and price controls he had single-mindedly advocated throughout the campaign.

Twelve successive wins

John D's record

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker reserved judgment Monday night on the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party in the wake of the defeat suffered by the party at the hands of the Liberals in the general election.

Diefenbaker, who had little trouble posting his 12th consecutive victory for the Conservatives in a federal election, declined to comment on the possible effect of the election on Robert Stanfield's leadership of the party. "It's too early to talk about those things."

The election of Diefenbaker in Prince Albert was never in doubt. He piled up a commanding early lead and finished the night with 5,200 more votes than the combined total of his three opponents.

While expressing disappointment at the national result, Diefenbaker said his win "represents the first time in Canadian history that someone has won 12 successive general elections." The 78-year-old Diefenbaker said the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier had 1 consecutive victories during his reign as prime minister.

"I'm disappointed at the national result, but after all, the people have spoken and I accept the verdict," said Diefenbaker.

"I do feel that the people of the prairie provinces took their stand, and strongly, against the Trudeau government because too often in the last few years the west has been forgotten."

Diefenbaker said he was "very sorry" to hear of the personal defeat of NDP leader David Lewis. "I always had for him that respect which I give to political opponents who I regard as sincere."

Davis loses to Tory

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis was defeated by Conservative Ron Huntington in the federal election Monday after holding the riding for 12 years.

Less than two hours after the polls closed in B.C., the minister conceded defeat to Huntington, 53, who lost to Davis in the 1972 general federal election by 6,616 voter.

The North Vancouver businessman campaigned hard to topple the 58-year-old cabinet minister, who won his seat in 1968 by 21,000 votes — the highest majority of any candidate in Canada.

"I'm going to continue in politics," Davis said in an interview shortly after conceding defeat.

"I'm not quite sure what I'm going to be doing in the next month or two, but in the long run I'll be involved in political life."

Asked when he would run again for the Liberal party, Davis replied: "When I get a chance."

He attributed his personal defeat, in part, to a feeling the Liberal government had ignored B.C.

Davis said he thought government spending was another factor adding to his defeat in the high-income riding.

This was only the third July election in Canada's history, and voting was carried out under generally warm, sunny skies. It appeared the number of voters who turned out would be well below the 1972 record of 9,667,489.

Sharp
'stupid campaign'

The counting was barely over when the politicians began finding reasons for the results.

One of the most pointed comments came from External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, who said "the Conservatives ran a stupid campaign." He said that by concentrating on inflation, Stanfield neglected other issues.

Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said the Conservatives made a mistake by inviting former prime minister John Diefenbaker back on the campaign trail.

"He said such stupidities that no one could believe him."

Anyway, none of the politicians had to wait long into the vote-counting to see that a Liberal victory was on the way.

Resoundingly defeated were more than 100 Communist candidates as well as members of such splinter groups as the Rhinoceros Party, a group of independents spoofing politics in general, the Garden Party, which wanted to legalize marijuana on Prince Edward Island, and the Waffle Party, which wanted to flatten the Rockies as an environment project.

The results shocked pollsters who predicted Trudeau would not run much better than he did in 1972 when his Liberals captured 109 seats in Canada's closest election ever.

Pollsters predicted before the election it would most likely end with neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives winning an absolute majority in the house of commons—133 seats.

Stock shock

Dow dives 21.20 to 770.57

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered Monday its second-biggest loss so far this year, with the Dow Jones industrial average plunging 21.20 to a 3½-year low of 770.57.

The Dow, a widely-followed indicator that includes 30 blue chip stocks, took its biggest loss since Feb. 4, when it gave up 22.44 points.

Trading on the New York stock exchange totalled 15.51 million, representing some of the heaviest selling in weeks.

Rising interest rates and steadily mounting business-loan demand in the United States have caused trouble on the stock market for months, and were blamed again for Monday's sell-off.

Douglas, the former NDP leader, was one who reversed the anti-NDP trend, winning easily in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

Another disaster for the NDP came in Surrey-White Rock, where the NDP's Barry Mather had been the MP since 1962.

Mather didn't seek re-election and the conservatives moved in behind teacher and evangelist Benno Friesen, who won an easy victory.

The Conservatives also won victories in Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, Esquimalt-Saanich, Fraser Valley East, Fraser Valley West, Okanagan-Boundary, Prince George-Peace River, Vancouver Quadra, Vancouver South and Victoria.

Most of their victories were easy ones.

The Liberals were pulling off some surprises of their own, with journalist Simma Holt winning in the traditional NDP riding of Vancouver Kingsway and Iona Campagnola beating veteran NDP member Frank Howard in the Northern Skeena Riding.

Howard had dismissed suggestions that provincial NDP policies would hurt his chances, but was obviously hurt by provincial policies, especially the controversial mining act.

The shocking news was the smashing of the NDP, which fell to its lowest B.C. representation since 1940, when the CCF, forerunner of the NDP, won only one of B.C.'s 16 seats.

The only other NDP candidate to win a victory was Stuart Leggatt, who won a close battle in New Westminster, the riding he took from the Liberals in 1972.

Some of the NDP losses were almost unbelievable. Among those crashing to defeat were Ran Harding, the party's environment critic, who was defeated by Conservative Bob Brisco in Kootenay West, which hadn't swung from the NDP or the CCF since 1945.

Israeli commandos strike at 3 ports

Israeli commandos blew up a number of small vessels in three Lebanese harbors Monday night in a hit-and-run attack that the Israeli command called a warning against a planned Arab guerrilla sea attack against Israel.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said troops going ashore from naval gunboats sank about 30 boats — "about 10 boats in each harbor" — at Tyre, Ras-e-Shak and Sidon, three of the biggest Lebanese ports. Sidon is 30 miles north of the Israeli frontier.

But a Lebanese military communique reported the sinking of only 11 fishing boats and said one person was wounded when a delayed explosive charge exploded in Sidon harbor.

The Tel Aviv command said it knew nothing of gunboats shelling two Lebanese ports or helicopters patrolling while the raid was in progress, as reported from Beirut.

The Palestinian news agency WAFA said four small fishing harbors came under attack by six to seven Israeli gunboats and torpedo boats. WAFA said the Israeli attack began at 10:45 p.m. with the shelling of Tyre harbor and "at the same time a number of enemy troops infiltrated the region from a naval vessel and placed explosive charges under the wood dock."

The agency said the Israeli forces were engaged by local citizens and Lebanese army troops.

Israeli military sources said naval gunboats took the commandos to the harbors where they blew up 10 motorboats in each with planted explosives. One source said there were no Lebanese or guerrilla casualties. The military command said Israel suffered no casualties.

"It was a lightning operation," a military source said. "It was more of a warning than anything because we saw that preparations were underway for an assault."

It was the first naval operation against the Lebanese coast since May 10 when gunboats struck what Israel described as a guerrilla base at Rashadiyeh.

"It was just a warning that the sea route to Israel also is not open," a source said. "If they think the sea route is open, we showed them that it isn't and that they had better beware."

Defence Minister Shimon Peres said after the June 24 guerrilla assault against the northern Israel town of Nahariyya that saw four Israelis and three Arabs slain that Israeli forces virtually shut the land route into Israel by tightening security at the Lebanese frontier.

Military sources have said Israel has built new fencing, erected more barbed wire and installed electronic sensors to halt guerrilla infiltration.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said last month that Israel would not be limited to individual retaliatory actions for specific Arab guerrilla attacks.

"The war that we are going to conduct is to be a continuous one, rather than in reaction to an action," Rabin said.

Navy to scrap 291 vessels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Navy is scrapping nearly 291 old carriers, cruisers and other ships in the first major reduction of its "mothball fleet" since the Second World War. The navy described them as either worn-out or outdated.

Their scrapping will leave 536 ships and smaller craft in the reserve fleet. The navy said it expects to net about $20 million, which will buy about one-third of a new patrol frigate.

Paddy workers' in fatal ride

TOKYO (UPI) — Five women on their way to work in a rice paddy were killed when their overloaded motorboat capsized in a swamp in a village near Aomori in northern Japan, police reported. Police said the 18-year-old helmsman swam to safety.

Appearing at his riding headquarters with his wife Sophie by his side, Lewis said, "Maybe I don't have to worry about retirement now. The electorate of South York may have retired me."

But, he added, "I have not stopped working for democratic socialism. As long as there is breath in me, I will continue to work for it."

Lewis was first elected in 1962. He lost the following year but was returned in 1965 and represented York South continuously until his defeat Monday.

Mrs. Lewis, who travelled nearly everywhere with her husband during his eight-week election campaign, said the NDP may have lost a member but she has gained a husband.

McKinnon said his party's policy of wage and price controls did not go over well with the national electorate but it had great appeal in Victoria where many older persons lived on fixed incomes, and he said this was one of the reasons for his victory.

The iussue was never in doubt in Esquimalt-Saanich where Donald Munro, the incumbent Conservative, retained his seat with 27,186 votes over the 16,259 votes cast for Liberal Donovan Joy, when 311 polls out of 312 had reported.

Here again, the NDP's share of the vote dropped sharply. In the 1972 election the NDP placed second with 15,878 votes but this time Peter Smart (NDP) polled only 10,222 votes. The Socred, Gerald Clarke, drew 875 votes and Barry Dean (Communist) 176.

The overall drop in NDP support on the Island sparked immediate speculation about whether it was due to a backlash against the provincial NDP government.

Ears peeled for poisonous toads

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — Five escaped sugar cane toads will have a special request played for them this week over radio stations in this tropical North Australian town.

The "request" will be a sample of the toads' mating call, taped by a university professor in the hope that the five toads, all dangerous to animals, will be caught once people recognize the toads' distinctive night-time sound.

The professor and officials of the northern territory wildlife department will tour the suburbs of this town of 50,000 persons playing the call from tape recorders in an effort to lure the toads into the open.

What began as a chuckle three weeks ago has become a serious matter.

Additionally, the eight-inch-long toads pack a poison, squirted from shoulder humps, which can kill dogs, cats and pigs.

Prof. Michael Tyler, who will fly 1,700 miles here from Adelaide to help the hunters, said Monday the toads may pose a major threat to farmers and may become a nuisance to householders.

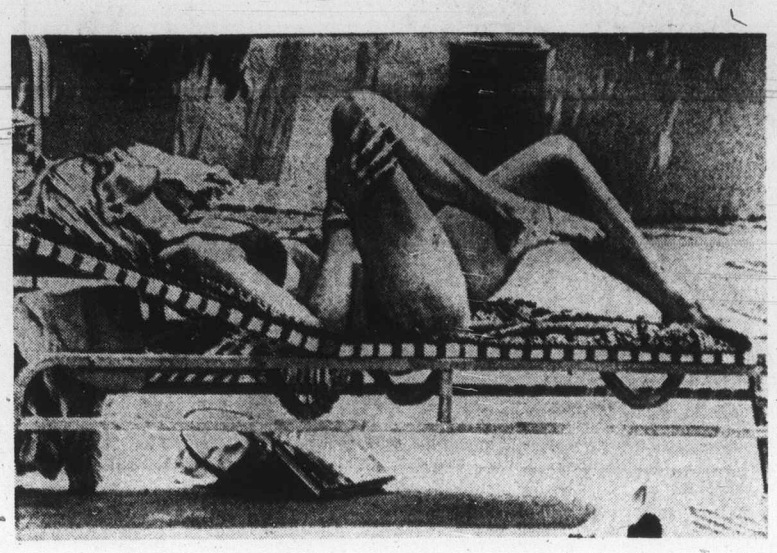

He said in one year, a male and female toad can produce 20,000 toads.

Originally, 18 toads were brought to Darwin from Queensland by a biology teacher who wanted to use them in school lessons.

They escaped from his home and the hunt has been on since.

Wildlife department officers and school children managed to account for all but five.

Tyler said the toads — the sex of missing five is not known — have been free long enough to start breeding. Apart from producing 20,000 eggs annually the toads have a lifespan of up to 40 years.

Picture it: a ballot of 73 names

By BILL COULTHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — So you think it's a bother having to go to the polls again only 20 months after the last federal election?

How would you like to be faced with a ballot of 73 names and required to mark it showing your preference for the candidates in order from one to 73?

That was the task facing voters in New South Wales, Australia, when they cast ballots to choose their state's members of the Australian senate last May.

And, said F. L. Ley, chief Australian electoral officer, anyone who shirked his civic responsibilities by not voting was subject to a $10 fine.

Ley said Australia is looking for ways to simplify the voting for senators, which is unwieldly not only for voters but for electoral officers who have to count ballots.

While it takes a Canadian voter only moments to mark the single "X" that shows his choice for a member to represent him in Parliament, an Australian voter takes an average of 6.8 minutes to list in order of preference his choices for senators. Australians also vote at the same time for their member of the House of Representatives.

When the votes are in, it then takes authorities a month or more to determine who, in fact, was elected to the senate. Results for the representatives are largely available about as quickly as they are in Canada however.

"I think it's safe to say" that Australia will adopt a new system under which voters will not have to mark their preference for all senate candidates, Ley said.

Permanent voters' list

Australia has a permanent voters' list — with voters again subject to a $10 fine if they do not keep their names up to date if they move. It enables that country to permit absentee voting.

This also slows the results, as overseas votes are not counted until 12 days after the election.

But it speeds the preparation for an election to about one month, compared with about two months in Canada.

"We can be ready for an election on very short notice," Ley said.

Puerto Rico recently has adopted Canada's system of house-to-house enumeration of electors but has not yet tried it out in an election.

Aponte said he is here to see how it works, study the procedures, and find out "which of them fits into the Puerto Rican reality."

He also expressed interest in Canada's system of advance polls for voters who cannot be in their riding on election day.

Morton was in Ottawa as part of a study of electoral procedures which is taking him to most provinces and to a number of other countries throughout the democratic world.

He has the task of coming up with a draft for a new B.C. elections act in time for the B.C. legislature's spring session next year.

Officials trim pay to battle inflation

LOGANSPORT, Ind. — Members of the Cass County board of commissioners have voted a pay cut for themselves.

They asked all elected officials of the county to help fight inflation by soliciting no salary increases for 1975.

"Inflation is the No. 1 problem in the country today," said Bernard Rose, a farmer who heads the board as president. "I don't think we can ask other county officials to battle inflation unless we set an example ourselves."

The example the three commissioners set was to eliminate a transportation item from the budget being prepared for next year. State law authorizes commissioners to receive mileage for travel to board meetings and around the area on county business.

NEW YORK — The weekend was both good and bad for New Yorkers. On the good side, temperature soared into the 90s and countless residents and tourists, like Ina Anderson of Copenhagen sunned themselves in parks, on beaches and on many rooftops. But this weekend was also one of the worst for violence as six persons were murdered in four separate incidents in the area.

MAYS LANDING, N.J. — Tracy Ann and Lee Williams began their honeymoon at the Sunshine Park nudist camp, where they were married in a poolside ceremony. They were married by Rev. LANCASTER, Pa. — Harry Gieg was digging a drainage trench outside his home during the weekend when he unearthed a gold wedding ring. Through the Lancaster County courthouse, he tracked down the owner, Mrs. Richard Keene, of Lancaster, who said she lost her ring 21 years ago when her mischievous two-year-old son, Michael, took it and misplaced it. Michael, now a 23-year-old college student, volunteered to pick up the ring at Gieg's home. Carved inside the ring is the date of Mrs. Keene's wedding — Friday, the 13th.

Sometimes this and other such exchanges with himself are "very confusing," he conceded.

Nixon 'not so bad'

MANILA (UPI) — Karen Morrison, the American entry in the 1974 Miss Universe beauty pageant, said on the weekend she feels President Nixon is "not so bad" and that Americans still don't know enough about Watergate.

The five-foot-11-inch beauty, a threatre arts student from Saint Charles, Ill., and 58 other Miss Universe contestants were formally introduced to Filipino newsmen at a news conference.

Asked what she thinks of Nixon, the 19-year-old Miss Morrison said "he's not so bad."

On Nixon's recent trip to the Soviet Union and the Middle East, Miss Morrison said, "I really haven't got a chance to read that much about it because I've been travelling. I think it's very, very important, from what I have read."

Miss Morrison, who has a 36-25-36 figure, also was asked her views on Watergate.

"I think people don't know that much about it," she said. "I think there's a lot more to be found out as far as that goes."

Reporters to $301

Canadian Press

A tentative contract agreement for workers at Ottawa's two English-language daily newspapers, the Citizen and the Journal, was ratified Sunday at a joint meeting of four employee unions.

The proposed wage-and-benefit package "is the best settlement negotiated in Canada without a strike," said Allan Heritage, spokesman for the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, the bargaining agent for the unions.

The contract now would be sent to individual unions for ratification or rejection. A decision is expected within about two weeks, said Heritage.

The proposed settlement, reached early Saturday morning, would end seven months of negotiations in a contract dispute which caused work slow-downs and cancellation of publication on three occasions.

The contract would give district managers and five-year Citizen reporters weekly salaries of $301 in a 30-month contract, an $83 increase from the present $218.10 a week. Journal reporters are not organized.

Journeyman compositors, printers and circulation truck-drivers would reach the $301 level over a 32-month contract.

Meanwhile, in B.C., the Prince George Citizen did not publish Monday because of a labor dispute with its printers. It was the first time the newspaper, with a circulation of 18,000, failed to appear since it became a daily in 1957.

A company spokesman said the printers, members of the International Typographical Union, Local 868, came to work at the usual time of 7:30 a.m., but walked out for a study session around 10 a.m.

The session was expected to last until around 4 p.m., when the printers planned to leave early to vote in the federal election.

Although the company last week served 72-hour lockout notice on the printers, it has not yet been executed.

Further twirling

IT IS WELL that, at last, Canada has a government with a working majority even though it means further upward twirling of the inflation spiral.

The only new wage-price fighting stance seen in the general election was rejected in favor of a continuation of the ho-hum dealings of Prime Minister Trudeau with this most important issue of all.

Because Progressive Conservative Leader Stanfield was unable to explain in detail the controls he proposed on incomes and prices due to the way in which he planned on implementing them, the electorate was wary. His 90-day freeze to be followed with measures to be worked out in consultation with the provincial governments together with business, industry and labor, was not good enough. No assurance could be given that his planned co-operative action would bring desired results. This was his downfall.

One-sided measures NDP Leader Lewis had in mind were even less acceptable and undoubtedly were a factor in the heavy losses the socialists suffered. And there was the disenchantment, too, with the performances of the NDP provincially, it would appear.

So the electorate turned more toward the Liberals, pushing the NDP from its preferred position as holders of the balance of power at Ottawa and, at the same time, giving the Conservatives a strong official Opposition seating.

Possibly the most welcome outcome of the vote is the removal of the NDP influence in the governing of the nation which amounted to faulty representation and placed the voter in an uneasy position.

That doesn't mean ridding the nation of discomfort, though; at least not for that section of the electorate that feared inflation-fighting controls and threw support to the Liberals.

Prime Minister Trudeau has a contingency controls plan up his sleeve which, the way things are going, he may have to show. He could quite easily be forced into rolling up that sleeve in the not-to-distant future and putting up the fight that Mr. Stanfield was ready and willing to do now, before the curse of inflation does further damage.

"Touchdown!"

Dead wrong

IF BRITISH COLUMBIA'S minister of highways still can't see it perhaps others in the provincial cabinet can force the issue on speed being a major factor in the increasing number of traffic fatalities being recorded here and elsewhere in Canada. The minister, Graham Lea, said recently he did not think a reduction in the 60 and 70 miles an hour limits on provincial highways would have much of an effect on the number of accidents when it was suggested to him that he follow the lead of the United States and cut highway driving down to 55 mph.

The reduction was ordered last winter to conserve gasoline consumption which it has done to a slight degree, it is reported.

Resulting conservation of life is more than slight in the U.S. Independence Day highway travel statistics just compiled. Compared to 758 fatalities during the July 4 holiday period last year there were only 524 this year.

The U.S. National Safety Council says chances of survival in a crash at 50 miles an hour are four times greater than at 70 mph and statistics indicate that 75 per cent compliance with the 55 mph limit might save 8,500 lives a year.

The results of 55 mph driving in the U.S. have so impressed the provincial government in Ontario that serious consideration is being given to lowering limits, at least on freeways running through urban areas, the Canadian Press reports from Toronto. "There's no doubt," says Ontario's Transportation Minister John Rhodes, "that lowering the speed limit in the United States has made a big difference in the number of accidents and fatalities."

Last week 78 persons died in traffic accidents in Canada to bring the total for the year to 1,814. Included were 37 fatalities on the weekend just passed. British Columbia contributed only one to the weekend total, but that was unusual. B.C. more often than not distinguishes itself as a leader among the 10 provinces in the road death records that are written each weekend.

Graham Lea should know this as well as anyone but it doesn't appear to get to him. Perhaps his colleagues can.

Begging

AS WE REMARKED almost a year ago, the removal of the vagrancy sections of the Criminal Code appeared to have no serious effects on begging in the streets of Victoria: "There may be more people begging, but generally it's in an amiable and even — as with some of the street musicians — a pleasant way."

But now the city council wants a bylaw that will ban active begging — actually requesting money — and permit passive begging — giving some sort of a musical performance in hope of reward.

Ald. Tom Christie's fear that this would draw an influx of street musicians from across North America into this "open town" may be exaggerated. But it does bring to mind the corny old joke about the lute and the lyre being the most important parts of a band. If the bylaw is passed, many a beggar will get his loot by being a liar about being a musician.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

School talk

Trustee Walter Donald recently made a statement that the honorable minister's White Paper eroded local autonomy and called for greater centralization of educational services. Trustee Donald deplored this move and said that the B.C. School Trustees' Association would indeed be presenting their own White Paper to the minister early in the fall.

I find this a strange contradiction in terms. The Greater Victoria School Board has, along with 69 other school boards in B.C., assigned all its bargaining rights over to the BCSTA This school board will not meet with the representatives of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association to discuss an agreement. Surely the trustees have eroded their own autonomy and abrogated their local responsibility by their latest move?

Salary policies, working conditions, learning conditions, and educational services are all inextricably linked and therefore any process dealing with any one part would have to take into consideration and allow for the effects on other parts.

The GVTA acknowledges the difficulties and unpleasantness which often arise from negotiations but to enlarge the bargaining unit so that individual trustees may be spared from these is not acceptable.

Surely local autonomy which Trustee Donald appears to desire includes sitting down with teachers to determine their needs as well as the educational community needs?

President,
Greater Victoria Teachers' Association

On parade

The magnificent ceremony of Trooping the Color performed at the Royal Athletic Park by Third Battalion Princess Patricia's Light Infantry before an unusually large and appreciative audience was given "coverage" in The Colonist in the form of a small photograph of a veteran in a wheel chair watching the event. While not wishing to detract in any way from the gentleman's well deserved publicity, surely a little more coverage in the way of photos could have been shown in our local press. Tourists flock by the thousands to witness Trooping the Color in London, England, and the performance of the Pats put on here was just as impressive and well executed as any I have seen in that, my native, city.

Even more important, and inexcusable, your reporter was in error in stating that the salute was taken by the Lieutenant Governor, Walter Owen. It was in fact Major General George Pearkes who, of course, served with the Pats, who was reviewing officer.

Such reporting errors reflect badly on the quality of your staff who, recently held out for six months for what they considered their just dues for their skills and labor.

SPECTATOR.

Stupid

I have been a resident of Oak Bay for the past eight years, and am the proud owner of a 16' sleek Cobra boat. Twice annually I put this boat on my parking pad for general maintenance and the time involved is approximately two weeks. The boat on the parking pad is 15' from the road and due to my large shrubs can only be seen when approaching from the south. Last evening a very courteous Oak Bay constable arrived at my door and said, "Mr. James we have had a complaint from an Oak Bay resident that the position of your boat is in contravention of a local bylaw, and you will have to move same." To which I answered, "Where would you like me to move it?" To which he answered, "Park it on the road, but you have to move it once every 24 hours." I then asked, "How far do I have to move same." Answer, "Oh, a foot." At present the boat is parked on the road, and is obviously a nuisance both to motorists using Eastdowne Rd., and to my neighbor across the street as it interferes with him backing out of his driveway. This appears to myself and my neighbors to be stupid, and with all the other troubles and woes in the world and Canada, surely the Oak Bay Police Department must get fed up to the teeth with this type of useless complaint.

DICK JAMES,
Victoria.

Rezoning

Concerning your report (June 25) of the Saanich council meeting, I would like to observe that the opponents of a rezoning application came from about 25 households on four streets. They objected primarily to the increased traffic hazard which would be created by the proposed duplex and eight additional new homes in the immediate area. Most of these dwellings will empty out onto a substandard street, which already is a hazard, and which empties on to Blenkinsop at an intersection posted as concealed.

The proposed duplex itself, fronts on an existing bus stop on Blenkinsop, where there is no clearly delineated sidewalk, no access, and where the Saanich engineering department had previously reported that it would be too dangerous to provide an access for the houses which will be routed along the substandard street, itself one lane at the crest of a steep hill and around curves.

In addition, continually increasing the population density of neighborhoods throughout Saanich leads to urban decay and impersonality, as can readily be seen anywhere from Vancouver to Halifax, from Seattle to New York. Neither renters nor owners benefit from this.

As for renters being second-class in Saanich, the house in which we live was rented, by us, and others before us, before we bought it. So also was the house next to us rented last year. The people on our street are not anti-renter. We still frequently see, on a social basis, our renter neighbors of last year. Our protests were designed to maintain a pleasant neighborhood for all renters and owners. New housing facilities should be created in satellite communities, rather than destroying existing communities.

Strikes

I think we all know that the number of strikes and walkouts being organized is not natural, but that they are being instigated. If anyone wants to learn how this is being done I would recommend reading "The Subverters of Liberty" by J. Bernard Hutton. I believe the author uses a pseudonym. He would need to, or his life would not be worth much.

This book explains how the "subverters" are trained in Russia and infiltrated into the Western democracies with a view to destroying the capitalist system. Years are spent in training these people so that they are proficient in the English language and can pass as nationals of the country where they are planted. How successful they are can be seen by the results in Britain and Northern Ireland — and now in Canada and the United States.

The favorite ploy is evidently to take a minor grievance and blow it up out of all proportion — as witness the telephone strike. A more frivolous reason for inciting these people to walk away from their jobs can hardly be imagined. Read this book. It is alarming, but when the country has been destroyed economically and our way of life ruined, we shall at least know how and why it happened.

M. SIMPSON,
Victoria.

For the handicapped

Having just returned from a visit to my Saskatoon office, I am again struck by the lack of facilities for the physically handicapped in Victoria as compared to the real efforts made by the City of Saskatoon to provide easy access in that prairie city.

Everywhere in Saskatoon one sees wheel-chair crossings and buildings with the "wheel-chair" decal on their doors, signifying that the building has elevators, street-level access, wide doors and proper washroom facilities for those in a wheel-chair. It is apparent that not only have Saskatoon's elected officials made a serious attempt to facilitate the movement of their handicapped citizens around their city, but, that the merchants, particularly, in the downtown area, have co-operated in a whole-hearted way in this regard.

Here, in this most beautiful of all Canadian cities where we have the highest percentage of old-age pensioners (many of them handicapped) in Canada, we have made no attempt at all to accommodate those who are physically disabled within our midst. There are no wheel-chair crossings to allow disabled persons to cross our streets in safety, I can't recall ever seeing a "wheel-chair" decal on any public building (although a few medical buildings make the necessary allowances for wheel-chair patients), and even our university and Camosun College are so poorly designed that a disabled person cannot move about these expensive halls of learning without considerable assistance from their fellow, non-disabled students.

Living accommodation for the severely disabled is extremely limited and, despite the pious bleatings of Mayor Pollen and his council, the high-rise apartment blocks that continue to proliferate in our community do so without including suitable accommodation for severely disabled persons.

Vancouver has done much better in this regard, admittedly with the help of a federal L.I.P. grant, and it is now possible for that city's "wheel-chair citizens" to move with comparative ease and safety in many of the more congested areas of the city.

As president of a national, professional society concerned with the rehabilitation of handicapped persons, I call upon the mayors and councils of the core municipalities to turn their attention to this problem, and to produce a solution with a minimum of the usual bickering and stalling that generally takes place when politicians are faced with problems that they have difficulty in grasping and are loath to seek advice about.

R. W. DUDLEY,
National President,
Canadian Association of Rehabilitation Personnel.

Some different views

On the new nuclear age

Has the world really entered a new nuclear age? Newsweek International asked some prominent defence strategists for their answer:

Robert O'Neill
Australian National University

The psychological barrier has certainly been dinted. I will be very surprised if we do not see a rash of nuclear proliferation over the next decade. The most serious thing about the Indian test is that it undermines the moral inhibitions that have held since the signing of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty — even though India herself did not sign. There was a feeling that India would not want to develop nuclear weapons, in line with the higher moral tone she adopted toward such issues. In addition, the Canadian experience has shown that if you help a country with nuclear technology that country will be able to cover the remaining distance to weapons production by itself.

Edmund Stillman
American strategist

After the Indian experience, there is no way to safeguard against nations making their own nucear devices. Peaceful and military know-how are inseparable. It is childishly easy to develop an A-bomb once you have obtained a high level of nuclear technology.

Harry Hamm
West German commentator

I don't see these explosions as anything new or alarming. There was an outcry when the Chinese exploded their first atomic bomb. And yet I suspect that if China had not had the bomb, the situation along the Soviet-Chinese border would have been much hotter — you could make a case that the Chinese A-bomb prevented or discouraged a Soviet invasion. Now we don't even know that the Indians are capable of building a transportable bomb which would be used in war. But if they are, I don't believe that it would necessarily be bad for peace in that part of the world. If atomic weapons helped prevent war between the superpowers, why should they not perform the same function in the hands of the smaller nations? Would India and Pakistan or Egypt and Israel be more likely to start shooting at each other if both sides knew that the enemy can retaliate with an atomic weapon? I don't think so.

Other countries will no longer be victims of the American and Soviet myths that only the great powers can afford a nuclear capacity and that there are no technological benefits to be derived from its possession. Nuclear weaponry is cheap and the technological fallout is enormous. Nuclear power is within the reach of medium-sized countries now. In five to 15 years, 10 countries can and will enter the nuclear age. Then we may have a period of state terrorism.

Gen. Johannes Steinhoff
Former West German NATO official

The Indian explosion was bad news. The postwar peace and detente were both made possible by the nuclear monopoly of the big powers, which was much resented by many but very good for the world as a whole. Now that India has blasted her way into the nuclear club, lots of smaller countries will feel encouraged to follow suit — the lesson being that if you have a severe domestic problem and a real or imagined threat on your border, you can win points on both counts by building an A-bomb and exploding it. And world opinion be damned. The danger is now great that the nuclear landscape will rapidly grow more complicated and more difficult to survey.

Kenneth Hunt
London International Institute for Strategic Studies

What we are seeing is the inevitable proliferation of nuclear reactors. They've become upvalued by the oil crisis. And of course there's always a military risk. When we put reactors in various hands, we have to supply them with plutonium to run them. If a country wants to slip some of this plutonium to one side and start saving it up, it can make a bomb.

What the Indian explosion —don't call it a bomb— means is that certain countries who've had an open mind so far on going nuclear might think again. But I don't see anyone (else) taking a positive step.

Makoto Momoi
Japanese defence strategist

The safeguards are already broken both politically and psychologically. Witness the Egyptian foreign minister's statement that if Israel should go nuclear militarily so would Egypt. Or the Pakistani prime minister's declaration that his people would overwhelmingly support acceleration of nuclear development lest Pakistan succumb to an Indian nuclear threat. Hence, without fear of international sanction and with non-existent safeguards, there will be an emergence of many "peaceful" nuclear mini-states.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The abolition of slavery in Canada began 181 years ago today — in 1793 — when Upper Canada prohibited the import of slaves. In other Canadian colonies courts refused to uphold slavery as an institution, but pronounced no legal abolition. Slavery had been accepted in Canada by the Indians and the first French and English settlers but was formally ended by British Parliament in 1833. Canadians helped run the "underground railroad" to bring blacks to freedom from the slave states of the United States.

1810 — Napoleon united Holland with France.

Highly industrialized nation not self-sufficient in anything

THE WORLD'S STRUGGLE FOR RESOURCES

By TAKASHI OKA from Tokyo, Japan

Of all the world's industrialized nations, Japan is best entitled to claim that nature has been ungenerous in its distribution of natural resources. Japan depends on imports for 99.7 per cent of its oil — and oil supplies 74.9 per cent of Japan's energy needs (1972). Japan's coal is mostly low-grade, and its mines are wearing out.

All the coking coal and all but 11 per cent of the iron ore Japan requires must come from abroad. Yet Japan is the third largest steelmaker.

As a steelmaker, Japan ranks just behind the United States and the Soviet Union — each of whom has vast internal reserves both of coal and iron.

Japan's giant and unique trading companies — Mitsui, Mitsubishi, Marubeni, and the rest — are helping to open up iron mines in Australia's rich Pilbara region, lead mines in Mexico, copper mines in Zaire and Zambia. They dicker with the Soviet Union for natural gas and oil. They are exploring Brazil's forest resources.

Theirs is a far-flung, painstakingly coordinated campaign to secure for Japan the resources it must have to keep its factories humming and its 105 million people in productive employment.

There is hardly a resource anywhere in the world that we haven't smelled out," says Eijiro Machida, managing director of Mitsui.

Almost simultaneously, three crises have hit Japan: the environmental crisis, which in its broadest sense is a synonym for the growth crisis, the energy crisis, and the resources crisis.

All industralized nations are experiencing all three crises. In the nine-nation European Economic Community, poorer in resources than the United States or the Soviet Union, the crisis is more acute than in either of these two superpowers. But in Japan the crisis is the severest of all.

The cost of oil has trebled or quadrupled, depending on what year you use as a baseline.

Coal, iron ore, copper, bauxite — a long list of industrial raw materials — are also on an upward price curve.

Despite long-term iron-ore contracts with Australia, for instance, Japan had to agree last fall to a 15 per cent in its payments for this commodity.

Finally, food costs have soared. Japan imports millions of tons of wheat annually from the United States and Canada. Almost all its soybeans come from the United States.

The government is encouraging rice production, which continues at a high yield. But Japan cannot be self-sufficient in food: only 14 per cent of its land is arable.

Yet Japan's leaders are not pessimistic. Nor are its wage earners, who have just won salary increases approaching 30 per cent, to deal with inflation which has been galloping along at an astounding 24 per cent rate.

Many Japanese think they need to change their approach to resources. "It's no longer a question of getting the capital and know-how and going into a country and taking out a resource," Machida said.

"Today the countries we deal with say, 'Yes, you may come in and develop a resource. But don't forget that the resource belongs to us.'

"If you want a resource, you've got to play the game the way the country you're dealing with wants it."

There is no doubt, in Machida's view, that the new approach will work, is in fact working. In the process, he thinks, trading companies must reconcile themselves to carrying on losing ventures.

Cooperation between big business and the government is a major aspect of Japan's restless search for resources, as it is in many other fields.

Companies with free-enterprise economies like the United States or West Germany complain there is no way they can compete with what they call "Japan, Inc." But such cooperation is not completely unknown in the West.

Despite Machida's optimism, the combination of crises that is assailing Japan today demands so fundamental a change in attitudes and approaches in so many fields that some doubt the economy's and much more the society's capacity to survive without going through wrenching dislocations.

The environmental crisis means that helter-skelter growth cannot continue. The physical limits imposed by Japan's constrained geographic space cannot be easily surmounted.

Steel production, now at around 120 million tons a year, can grow by another 30 million tons without noticeable strain. Beyond this point, perhaps one or two new steelmaking sites can be developed; that will probably be the limit.

The challenge is to develop steelmaking or petrochemical sites elsewhere in the world, from which semifinished steel, plastics, or synthetic fibres could be exported to Japan.

One major demand of the developing countries is that mineral resources be taken from their lands not in a raw state, but with increasing degrees of processing, so as to maximize both employment and profit for themselves.

The energy crisis works at cross purposes with the environmental or growth crisis, because it spurs a psychology of producing more and more in order to pay for the astronomically increased cost of oil imports.

The same psychology operates in energy-poor European countries like France, where President Valery Giscard d'Estaing wants his fellow citizens to produce "a 13th month" worth of exportable goods in order to meet the oil deficit.

This contradiction between energy and environment, resources and growth, cannot be solved in a purely national or even a bilateral context. World Bank and other international experts are convinced.

Lip service to international cooperation has got to be made concrete and specific — otherwise producers and consumers are likely to sink together.

The World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development have all prepared cooperation plans, without arousing noticeable enthusiasm by national governments.

Japan, by temperament and background, is unfortunately less prepared for this essential task of cooperation than most other countries. Isolated by language, even more by an inner cultural barrier that tends to hold non-Japanese at mental arm's length, the people of Japan have a painful, difficult task ahead of them.

To universalize what Japanese hitherto have tended to regard as an exclusively national characteristic, to shed their island mentality and to take on some of the characteristics of a continental or global people — that is the challenge confronting the Japanese.

They have broken the scarcity barrier — for themselves. They are just beginning to find they cannot reach abundance without a certain roominess of the spirit.

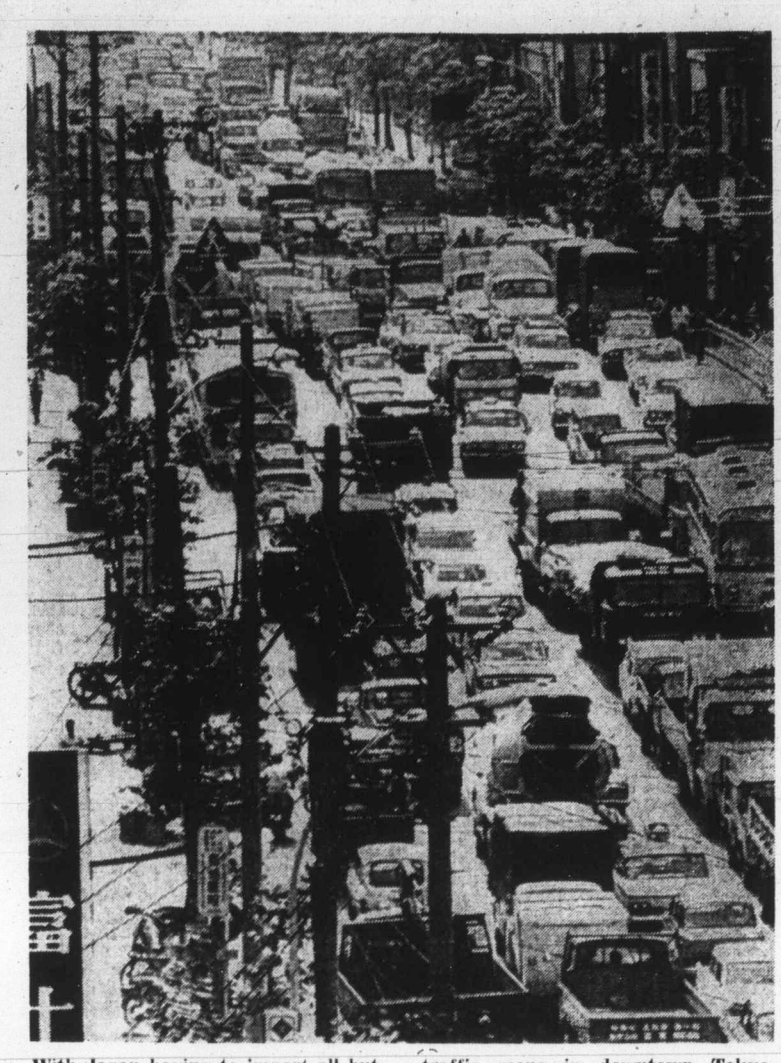

"It's already out of date," Machida says, for a company employee to think he is working for the company, or even for Japan. In our business, we have got to think in terms of working for the world.

"This is not idealistic fluff, it's hard common sense. In this day and age, we are not serving the interests of our own company unless we are working for the interest of mankind."

UVic sociologists disclose preliminary findings

Copyright 1974 by Daniel J. Keonig

A survey conducted this March by Dr. Daniel J. Koenig and Dr. Len Thornton of the University of Victoria's sociology department showed general support for police field practices in British Columbia.

Almost 2,500 adults, randomly selected from the 1972 federal voters' lists across British Columbia, were mailed questionnaires in mid-March. Of the 936 questionnaires which have been returned to date, 810 have now been processed and some highlights from the preliminary analysis are reported below.

Overall, 94 per cent of the sample rated their local police as either good or very good, one per cent fair and less than five per cent as either bad or very bad.

However, when people were asked how they thought others rated the police, the percentages were very good or good 59 per cent, fair 37 per cent and bad or very bad three per cent. Residents of B.C. appear to underrate the actual level of other residents' satisfaction with the police of the province.

But notwithstanding this widespread vote of confidence in the police, there are still some sore spots. For example, 12.6 per cent of the respondents claimed to have experienced rude treatment by the police and 4.1 per cent reported having had personal experience in which a policeman did not do his duty when he should have.

In addition, between one and three per cent of the respondents reported that one of the following had happened to them personally: taking sides in an argument between citizens, physical mistreatment, unfair treatment when arrested or suspected of a crime or a policeman covering up another policeman's wrongdoing.

A larger number reported that they had seen, or been told by an acquaintance, that one or more of these incidents had occurred.

In any interpretation of these data, however, it should be noted that the statistics refer to the cumulative lifetime experiences of individuals, and not necessarily to the percentage of police personnel engaging in such field practices.

In all likelihood, the actual percentage of police engaging in such field practices is smaller, considering for example that one rude police person may readily offend a dozen people a day.

In fact, the findings indicated that the actual standards of police field practice is far superior to those standards which would be employed by a large segment of the civilian population.

For instance, 52 per cent of the public feels that a policeman is justified in "roughing up" a disrespectful or abusive person, 25 per cent a "known sex criminal" and 23 per cent support roughing up a "hardened criminal to obtain information."

BACKGROUND

● More than 90 per cent rated their local police as good but fewer than 60 per cent thought others rated police the same way.

● More than 12 per cent told of rude treatment by police but more than 50 per cent felt police are justified in roughing up the disrespectful.

● Among young adults, 86 per cent rated police as good but 27 per cent said police had treated them roughly.

These were among the highlights of a preliminary analysis by two University of Victoria sociologists of a survey this year on B.C. attitudes and experiences in a number of fields.

The survey dealt with life satisfaction and federal politics as well as opinions about police, but this report on the preliminary findings deals solely with the police aspect.

BONUS FEATURE

OPINION

One can only speculate as to how much police physical mistreatment of civilians would be reported, and how respect and confidence in the police would drop, if as large a percentage of police felt justified in roughing up individuals in the above circumstances.

Some indication of this can be found in the case of young adults 25 years old or less. For the entire sample, 70 per cent thought police treatment of suspects about right, 19 per cent too lenient and 10 per cent felt police were too harsh or discriminatory (one per cent had no opinion).

But in the case of young adults, however, 23 per cent felt that the police were too harsh or discriminatory in their treatment of suspects.

Although 86 per cent of young adults rated their local police as good or very good, 13 per cent (proportionately four times as many as the entire sample) rated their local police as bad or very bad.

Twenty-seven per cent of young adults, compared to less than 10 per cent of adults older than 25, reported that they had personally experienced rude treatment by the police.

And 12 per cent of young adults, compared to less than three per cent of older respondents, believed that many or most of the police in their neighborhood enjoyed pushing people around and giving them a hard time.

Interestingly though, trouble with the law had only a negligible effect on people's attitudes.

For example, the rating of local police as good or very good was 94 per cent among the 85 respondents who had received a traffic ticket in the past year, 89 per cent among 47 respondents who had never been arrested for a crime other than traffic and 87 per cent among the 38 respondents who had been convicted of a crime other than a minor traffic violation.

However, 11 per cent of those arrested and 10 per cent of those convicted, compared to less than four per cent of the remainder of the sample, believed that many or most police enjoyed pushing people around and giving them a hard time.

Some of the other preliminary findings are that, in the past year, 38 per cent of the sample had called the police, 26 per cent had been victimized by a theft, 21 per cent by vandalism, four per cent by assault or threatened physical harm and one per cent by robbery.

Fifty-one per cent of the sample agreed or strongly agreed with the statement that "laws reflect the desires of the public" while 48 per cent disagreed or strongly disagreed.

Agreement or strong agreement to the statement, "the laws are too complex for people to understand," was reported by 58 per cent of the respondents. Fewer than eight per cent of the sample expressed any agreement with the statement, "a society without the police would be possible."

Overall, of those who answered the questionnaire, 52.7 per cent were women, 51.8 per cent lived or worked on the Lower Mainland, 23.4 per cent were members of labor unions, 75.2 per cent were married, 13.3 per cent single and the remainder widowed, divorced or separated.

The median age was 41.5, the median household income was $10,658 and the median formal educational attainment was 11.7 years.

No peeking, now

Margaret Trudeau peeks from behind polling booth in Ottawa, checking to make sure newsmen don't get a peek at her choice on ballot. She and prime minister both voted in Ottawa before visiting Trudeau's home riding of Mount Royal.

Blakeney will pass leadership

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney said Monday night he has no intention of seeking the federal NDP leadership.

"My job as premier is taxing enough," he said in an interview after hearing of the defeat of federal NDP leader David Lewis.

Describing himself as "a little bit disappointed" in the general election results, Blakeney said people appeared to be voting for a majority government, as opposed to voting on issues.

He predicted a federal-provincial battle if the re-elected Liberal government reintroduces its budget. Blakeney had objected strenuously to the budget's resource tax proposals.

Saskatchewan Liberal leader Dave Steuart said he expects Prime Minister Trudeau to sit down with provincial representatives and work out an acceptable resource-taxation policy.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

HALIFAX (CP) — Officials at Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's campaign headquarters were perplexed when a woman called to apply for a nursing job and another sought advice on nerve pill dosages.

It wasn't a prank by the opposition, the officials discovered, but the fact that the telephone listing once belonged to the Halifax Mental Hospital which ceased operation several years ago.

Liberals gain in Quebec

The grip tightens

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals strengthened their traditional stranglehold on Quebec province in Monday's election, eating into Social Credit support and dashing hopes for Progressive Conservative advances.

Conservative foreign affairs critic Claude Wagner was re-elected in St. Hyacinthe and Roch La Salle, who rejoined the Conservatives after sitting as an Independent in the last House, retained Joliette riding.

Heward Grafftey retained Brome-Missisquoi for the Conservatives and Georges Valade lost a seasaw battle in Montreal Ste. Marie with his Liberal opponent, incumbent Raymond Dupont.

The Liberals appeared destined to hold at least the 56 seats they won in the 1972 election and perhaps add one or two to that total.

Marcel Masse, Conservative hopeful in Labelle riding, lost to Liberal Maurice Dupras, while in Montreal St. Henri, broadcaster Frenchie Jarraud was defeated by his Liberal opponent, Gerard Loiselle.

Caouette's son, Gilles, lost his Charlevoix seat to Liberal Charles Lapointe. The younger Caouette had been touted as an eventual successor to his father.

Rene Matte, another possible future Socred leadership contender, was re-elected in Champlain riding, but party candidates in several traditionally Socred ridings were trailing their Liberal opponents.

Among Liberal cabinet members re-elected was Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, who defeated Michael Meighen, PC national president and grandson of former prime minister Arthur Meighen, in Montreal Westmount.

The New Democrats, counting in this election on union support and votes from Parti Quebecois supporters despite a PQ order to spoil ballots, held on to their record of never having elected a member of Parliament in Quebec.

Big whoopup marks phone's 100th year

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of Alexander Graham Bell's invention of the telephone here began officially Sunday with a three-hour parade.

Police estimated that the parade, with 195 entries including floats, antique vehicles and bands, attracted about 50,000 spectators.

Other weekend events included a band concert, a street dance, and an on-street performance of a musical, Thank You Mr. Bell.

Celebrations, which began July 1, will continue throughout the month.

Blast No. 37 by France

N-test renews protests

CANBERRA (UPI) — The prime ministers of Australia and New Zealand said Monday that France had set off another atmospheric nuclear blast in the Pacific and again registered protests.

In Paris, a French foreign ministry spokesman refused to comment, keeping to the government's practice of not announcing specific tests beforehand and refusing to confirm afterward whether they have occurred.

Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam said in a statement, "The Australian government has reason to believe that France has exploded an atmospheric nuclear device early today."

The test, which would be the 37th set off by France in the Pacific since 1964, was believed to have been carried out at Mururoa Atoll 720 miles southeast of Tahiti.

"I wish to reiterate what I said on June 17 that this further action by the French is a matter of deep concern to the Australian government," Whitlam said.

In Wellington, New Zealand Prime Minister Norman Kirk also said there was reason to believe France had exploded another nuclear device.

Kirk said at a news conference there was some evidence of fallout from the first French test June 17.

"I don't want to alarm anyone and the recording was very slight, but there is evidence that the tests do affect the level of radioactivity both here and in the territories near us," he said.

Kirk said he had received a message from French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing in which he "lays stress on France's decision to move the tests underground and this is a new element in the French position.

"Nonetheless, my government must continue to insist on the dangers inherent in all nuclear weapons testing and the need to put an end to them," Kirk said.

Giscard has said that the current French tests are to be the last in the atmosphere.

Only three days ago, Australia reopened its case at the World Court against French nuclear tests. France has boycotted hearings, contending the tests are a matter of internal security.

Luxury liner France heads to ignominious oblivion

PARIS (UPI) — The gracious life and the grandeur of France were dealt a double-edged blow Monday with an announcement the luxury liner France whose losses are expected to run $20 million this year will be retired in the fall.

Communist and non-Communist seamen's unions already have warned they would call a general strike aboard French ships if the France is pulled out of service. Some union officials hinted the liner might be occupied by its 950-man crew.

The French line said the austerity-minded government of French president Valery Giscard d'Estaing has refused to cover the mounting deficit of the 66,300-ton France, the world's largest passenger ship.

President Giscard — while serving as finance minister in the previous French government — had been critical of the cost of some programs of the late president Charles de Gaulle such as the France and the supersonic jetliner Concorde.

"It is with emotion and regrets and with the full cognizance of the grave social and commercial consequences that the company has been led to take this decision," the shipping line said in announcing the demise of the France.

Withdrawal of the France would leave only Cunard line's Queen Elizabeth 2, three Italian line ships and three Russian liners in regular transatlantic service.

The France lost $14 million last year and is expected to lose $20 million this year because of the increased cost of fuel.

The French line had tried in vain to whittle down the deficit by various economy measures such as cutting the size of the crew and eliminating free caviar and wine service.

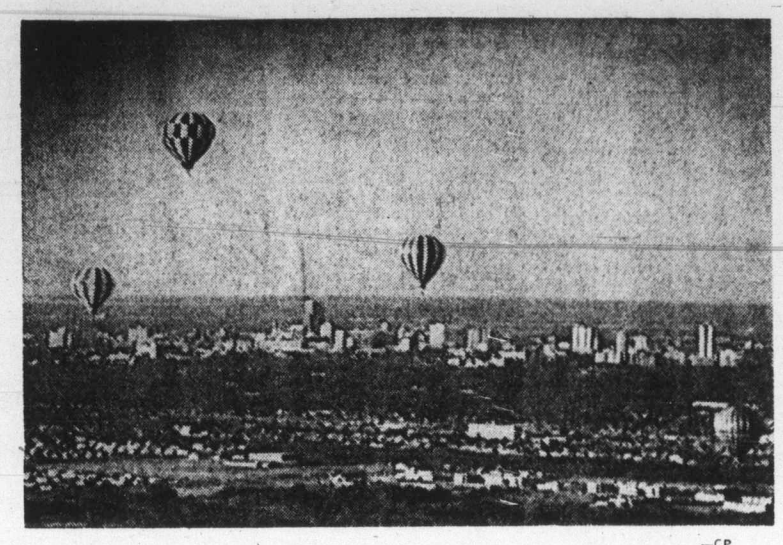

The company said it had convened an urgent meeting of personnel and the managing board to decide what to do with the huge vessel.

Faith heals many things but lops some off, too

LONDON (UPI) — John Michael Bradley, 25, walked into St. Charles Hospital Sunday and said, "I've had a message from God to have my right arm cut off."

Hospital personnel turned him away.

A few hours later he returned with a tourniquet on the newly severed arm. He explained that to fulfil "God's message" he had held his arm on a railway track and let a train run over it.

In urban areas only

Ontario may lower speed on highways

CP-AP

Transportation Minister John Rhodes said in Toronto Monday the Ontario government is considering reducing speed limits on provincial expressways which run through urban areas.

"There's no doubt that lowering the speed limit in the United States has made a big difference in the number of accidents and fatalities," he said.

A U.S. National Safety Association spokesman said "speed comes through as the major factor" in the drastic reduction of traffic fatalties since Americans reduced their speed limit to 55 miles an hour last winter to conserve gas.

Lowered speed limts are responsible for reducing the July 4 Independence Day holiday traffic death toll in the United States by almost one-third, a survey of law-enforcement and safety officials in the U.S. indicates.

While officials in some states reported somewhat less traffic than normal during the 102-hour holiday period, most of those questioned pointed to the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit as the major factor in reduced highways deaths.

"I think we're reducing the number of deaths every month that we have it and can enforce it adequately," said Col. E. W. Jones, commander of the North Carolina state patrol.

The National Safety Council predicted 450 to 550 persons would die during the four-day weekend. The toll stood Monday at 511, compared with 758 in 1972.

Province rates up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province Monday increased its home delivery rates, effective July 15, to $3.50 a month from $3.

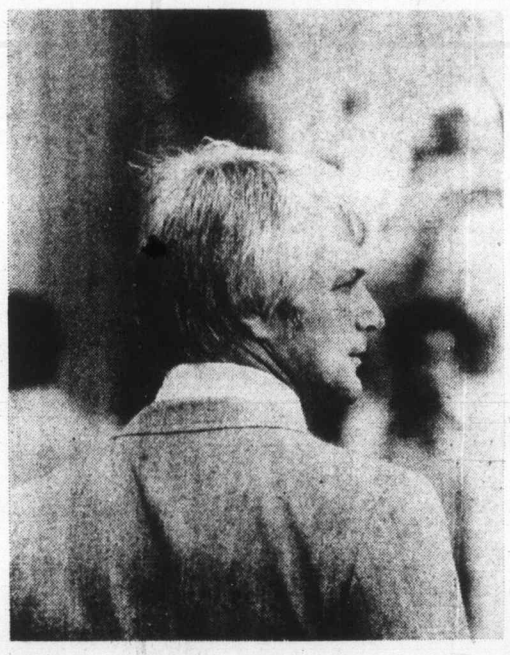

The morning newspaper will cost $4 a month at points in the B.C. interior where it now costs $3.50. The paper cited soaring costs in all areas of newspaper production.

The other daily newspaper in the city — The Vancouver Sun — increased its price to $3.50 from $3 on July 1.

Jet set

LONDON (UPI) — People who have trouble with their false teeth may soon have their problems solved by Rolls-Royce dentures. A dental journal report said people who regularly broke their dentures have had no trouble since being fitted with experimental dentures strengthened with carbon fibre developed by Rolls-Royce for use in jet engines.

A good insurance program is always planned by a good insurance man.

You probably have several life insurance policies. Most people do. But what do they all add up to?

An Imperial Life man will analyze them for you. He'll discuss with you your present and future needs. How well you have already looked after them. Family protection. Retirement. Disability income.

He receives extensive training and has on call a team of lawyers, accountants, estate planning experts.

After his initial training we keep him continually informed on all the new developments. He knows about Registered Savings Plans. Government pension plans. How your company group benefits work. Tax laws. And so on.

In short, we try to give him a background in all the elements that should fit into your total estate plan. That way, when an Imperial Life man talks to you, he's equipped to see the whole picture. And he can recommend a program that fits into it perfectly.

That's our definition of a good insurance program. And it takes a good insurance man to design that kind of program. An Imperial Life man.

Canal's deficit record

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — The U.S. government Panama Canal Company closed its books for fiscal 1974 on June 30, with a record deficit estimated at $12 million, a canal spokesman reports.

The spokesman said in Balboa Heights that the deficit occurred despite an $8 million increase in toll revenue, which was estimated at $121,384,000 for the year.

The number of ships passing through the canal rose only slightly during the year but the average size of the ships passing the waterway rose more dramatically, accounting for most of the increased toll money.

Rebound estimate

TOKYO (AP) — Japan Economic Research Centre, a private group, has released a report predicting a relatively sharp rebound in Japan's domestic economy this autumn. A gradual increase in government and consumer spending, continued gains in private investment in new plant and equipment and a strong export performance were cited for the anticipated upturn.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Interest rate and loan demand pressures swept the stock market into a steep decline Monday, carrying the major market indicators to their lowest levels in more than 3½ years.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrials fell 21.20 points to 770.57 and losers out-numbered gainers by a dramatic margin of 1,441 to 137.

The impetus for the decline was provided largely by weekly Federal Reserve Board figures released after Friday's close, which showed a record rise in business loans at major New York banks. That continued surge in loan demand seemed to spell continued upward momentum for interest rates, already at record highs.

McDonald's led a particularly marked decline in many of the big-name glamor and blue-chip issues, falling 9¼ to $38⅜ in active trading.

Elsewhere in the glamor group, IBM fell 6¾ at $199 and Xerox 6¼ to $101⅞.

American Telephone lost 1⅞ to $42⅞.

Among Canadian issues, Dome Mines gained 2⅛ to $48¼. Inco lost 1 to $26¼, Hiram Walker ¾ to $45½, Alcan ½ to $28½, Canadian Pacific ½ to $13¾, Massey Ferguson ¼ to $16⅛, Seagrams ⅜ to $35⅞. McIntyre closed unchanged at $31.

Cleveland bank tops 12

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Central National Bank of Cleveland Monday boosted its prime interest rate to a record 12¼ per cent, but the huge First National Bank of Chicago, expected to break through the top, hiked its prime rate only to the prevailing 12 per cent.

The Chicago bank, ninth largest in the United States, ignored for the second week in a row its own guidelines which called for a 12.46 per cent rate. The bank's former rate was 11.8 per cent.

Hillside grows

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

Plans are well underway for the development of a new one-stop building materials supermarket at Hillside Shopping Centre.

John Macdonald, the newly-appointed manager for the enterprise, said in an interview from Vancouver Monday that the Beaver Lumber Co. Ltd.'s 35,000-square-foot store should be open for business early in 1975. Sod-turning is scheduled for the last week in August, he added.

The store, which Macdonald said would employ about 60 people, is to be located in the now-vacant area between Zellers department store and the European Health Spa. An official of the developers said that it would be a separate one-storey building, that is, not connected with the main shopping mall.

The store is to be built by and for Dominion Construction Ltd. and Beaver, according to Macdonald, will lease it from them. Value of the building permit, a Dominion spokesman said, is $600,000.

The Victoria store is one of eight similar-sized outlets that will be opened across the country by the rapidly-expanding Beaver firm, which is based in Winnipeg.

Beaver was taken over in 1972 by the Molson Cos. Ltd. of Montreal and the chain has expanded to 220 outlets. The staff has grown from 1,800 to 3,000 in two years, according to a recent annual report.

Third edition of an experimental safety vehicle by Nissan Motors of Japan, makers of the Datsun, recently was shown at safety technical conference in England. It will protect passengers from 40 mph crashes in the front, at 30 mph in the rear and also boasts radar-controlled auto-brake system, alcohol interlock and dozing prevention devices. Cost to Nissan is $7.5 million, vehicle is not in production or available for purchase.

Nixon erred on surcharge

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. customs court ruled Monday the government must refund an estimated $500 million in surcharges President Nixon ordered paid on imports during a three-month period in 1971.

The majority opinion, written by chief judge Nils Boe, ruled that President Nixon's proclamation imposing the surcharge constituted "a power beyond the scope of any authority delegated to him by the congress."

The other members of the three-judge panel, Herbert Malete, and Edward Re, filed concurring opinions.

No money, however, will have to be refunded pending appeal.

Andrew Vance, chief of the customs section of the U.S. dept. of justice, said he expected to file an appeal with the court of customs and patent appeals in Washington.

The surcharge, imposed by Nixon to help offset the balance of payments problem, was in effect from Aug. 16 to Dec. 20, 1971. In most cases it required importers to pay the normal duty plus an additional 10 per cent of the value of the item imported.

Michael Bradfield, the treasury department's assistant general counsel for international affairs, said somewhat less than two-thirds of imports into U.S. were subject to the surcharge.

Big companies

Pensions get boost

TORONTO (CP) — Many corporations appear to be starting to recognize the impact of inflation on retired employees by increasing benefits to their pensions.

A recent sampling of large companies shows that adjustments to pension benefits range from one-time, lump-sum payments to provisions for year-by-year increases.

Laurence Coward, executive vice-president of pension consultant William M. Mercer Ltd., says "almost every big company has made some kind of ad hoc adjustment recently."

These adjustments, however, have not been accompanied by a great deal of publicity for several reasons: The assistance rarely comes close to matching the inflation rate, shareholders might complain about "give-aways" and even the current rate of pension aid might be too costly to maintain.

Traditionally, the dollar amounts of pensions have been established at or before retirement and few pensioners have a formal means of negotiating increased payments after that.

But pressure from unions and retired employees has prompted some companies to partly compensate for the rising cost of living.

E. J. Gaunt, employee relations manager of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., says: "Annuitants (pensioners) write in, or come in to see us. It kind of builds up."

"We take inflation and other things into account and we recognize from the pressure that something has to be done."

In January last year, Gulf increased monthly pension payments 10 per cent up to a maximum of $35 for workers who retired before 1969. The company has about 1,600 pensioners.

John Misland, employee benefits supervisor for Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., says steel companies have recognized the impact of inflation on pensioners by providing a fully-paid dental plan. Algoma and Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. recently granted increases to workers in recognition of higher living costs.

Imperial Oil has made a number of changes in its pension benefits, the latest in January, 1973, when benefits were increased an average $45 a month.

Ian Ashford, Imperial's senior co-ordinator for employee relations, says the change brought "an extremely favorable response" from the company's 3,000 or so pensioners, and now they are beginning to ask about the possibility of another adjustment.

"We're studying the situation, but we haven't come up with anything definite."

Companies which have made more recent changes in pension benefits are sometimes careful not to relate them to inflation, because, as one manufacturing company executive says, "we don't want to raise the expectations of pensioners.

"We don't want them to think we'll continue to respond to inflation because that could be too expensive."

Drill ship working off Florida

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (UPI) — An Exxon Oil Co. drill ship arrived off the coast here this weekend and will begin exploratory drilling for oil and gas this week on a 5,760-acre offshore gulf tract.

Exxon officials in New Orleans said Saturday the first test well would be sunk at a site about 40 miles off the Destin-Fort Walton beach area. The drilling is expected to take from four to six weeks.

"Assuming we find oil," the Exxon official said, "it will be at least two years before we bring it to shore for refining."

Exxon filed a written notice with a federal court in Tampa earlier this week announcing its plans to begin exploratory drilling.

Grenada planning tax haven status

LONDON (AFP) — The eastern Caribbean spice island of Grenada is expected to become a tax haven, the Financial Times says.

The Grenada government may announce a starting date of Jan. 1, 1975, a and a committee has been looking into a scheme for no income tax and no estate tax.

Grenada is likely to charge lower fees than the Bahamas and Cayman Islands to attract business, the paper says.

The island came independent of Britain in February.

If you Don't own the place you call "home", you could be in a heap of trouble!

Every Time You Buy A Loaf Of Bread Or A Quart Of Milk, A Pair Of Shoes, or any other necessity of life, you feel the impact of inflation.

What About The Biggest Necessity Of Life?

The cost of keeping a decent roof over your head. The necessity that takes the biggest part of your income. The one that's probably going to hurt more than all the others combined as inflation accelerates. How much more is "home" going to cost you next year? In two years? In five? Think about it.

The Time To Protect Yourself Is Now.

If you don't own the place you call home, you're at the mercy of inflation. The cost of renting has to at least keep pace with the cost of living. So every day you rent, you're unprotected. The smart thing is to make a move to protect yourself. Immediately.

When You Own, You're In Control.

The way to insure that the cost of keeping a decent roof over your head doesn't get completely out of control is to become an owner. This way you assure yourself that the mortgage payments you make each month will remain the same for the term of the mortgage. No ups, no increases. In short, when you own, you're in control.

Once You've Decided To Buy, Buy Smart.

If there is any one rule to follow when buying real estate, it is to always look for these three things — location, location and location!

And don't let high interest stop you. 1% higher interest on a $25,000 Loan costs only $208.00 a year. The value of our self-owned apartments will increase ten times that each year.

Global hockey league would fulfil dream of Ahearne

LONDON (Reuter) — Representatives of eight countries gather here next weekend to start building the world's first global ice hockey league.

They will begin by forming an eight-team European league which will begin play in September.

Visionaries see this as the core of a continent-spanning competition which, within a decade, will link teams in Asia, Europe and North America, involving such improbable entrants as Singapore, Spain, Australia and Japan.

Russia, Czechoslovakia and Sweden are expected to play a dominant part.

Canada, long a pacesetter in developing hockey, will provide a manpower pool to strengthen weaker teams.

If the global league materializes, it will mark a breakthrough in a long and bitter stalemate over the definition of amateur status in international hockey.

And it will realize a 40-year-old dream for controversial John F. "Bunny" Ahearne, a portly Irishman who became a top decision-maker in world hockey without ever lacing up a skate.

"A world hockey league will be something absolutely new in sport, a really breathtaking development," says Ahearne, 74.

As president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, Ahearne has long held international hockey in the hollow of his hand.

He has applied a rigid definition of amateur to prevent North America's top players from competing in league games abroad, thus infuriating Canadian hockey officials interested in global play.

One embittered Canadian threw a punch at Ahearne in a Stockholm hotel, but Ahearne ducked.

Now North America seems to have made its peace with Ahearne.

An arrangement has clearly been reached between Ahearne and Bruce Norris, 50, the millionaire president of Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League who is putting his bankroll behind world hockey plans.

Norris, who also heads a worldwide cattle and grain organization, has revived hockey in Britain by importing 13 Canadians, a couple of Americans and a Swede to form a team here called London Lions.

He is losing money on the operation, but the Lions will be a key team in the European league expected to be formed next weekend.

The Norris design for world hockey is being masterminded from an office near London's Piccadilly by his right-hand man, Joe Besch, who sees the winter sport as long overdue for expansion.

The eight countries who will send delegates to meetings here July 12-13 are Belgium, Czechoslovakia, England, Finland, Holland, Sweden, Switzerland and West Germany.

The world league likely will have North American, European and Asian sections, with divisional winners playing off for the world title. Besch envisages a circuit of about 20 teams.

Speaking briefly

Chris flies home without Jimmy

LONDON (AP) — Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the new Wimbledon women's champion, flew home Sunday with her mother and sister but without her fiance, Jimmy Connors, winner of the men's singles championship.

"As far as I know, he is flying tomorrow," a grim-faced Chris said at London Airport.

She shrugged off questions as to why he wasn't there to see her off.

She said she was going home for a rest and asked reporters to leave her alone.

Miss Evert and Connors, who are to be married this fall, opened the traditional Wimbledon Ball on Saturday night.

U.S. keeps lacrosse title

MELBOURNE — The United States was pushed before retaining its world field lacrosse title on the weekend while Canada took an embarrassing last-game loss.

The defending champions struggled to maintain their unbeaten record before topping Australia, 20-14, in the final match of the four-country championship.

Earlier, England took a quick five-goal lead and cruised to a 19-11 win over Canada. It was England's first win of the tournament.

The game was played in heavy rain.

In the title match the Americans played furiously in the final quarter, overwhelming the Aussies by a 9-2 margin to take a comfortable lead.

Canada trimmed Australia, 18-14, in the opening game but lost 26-15 to the Americans.

England completes romp

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — England completed the humiliation of India Monday, winning the third and final cricket test by an innings and 78 runs to take the series 3-0.

Having trailed England by 294 on first innings, the Indians were all out for 216 when Mike Hendrick had wicket-keeper Farokh Engineer leg-before-wicket for 33. It was the final act in a series which has seen England totally dominate India and take merciless revenge for losses to the Indians in 1971 and 1973.

England won the first test by 113 runs and the second by an innings and 285 runs.

PAUSE to renew his concentration is one of Gaylor Perry's secrets to success and he keeps his back to the catcher and won't accept the ball back until he's absolutely ready. It worked for 15 games but Oakland Athletics snapped his record winning streak Monday night with a 4-3 decision in 10 innings.

Perry's win streak snapped by Athletics

Gaylord Perry's string of consecutiye pitching victories came to an end at 15 Monday night, one short of the American League record.

The string was snapped when Oakland Athletic rookie Claude Washington singled home the winning run with two out in the 10th inning to give the A's a 4-3 American League baseball win over Cleveland Indians.

Vida Blue went the route for the Athletics, giving up only four hits as he gained his ninth win in 17 decisions.

The A's jumped into a 2-0 lead in the second inning but Cleveland moved ahead with two in the seventh after scoring once in the fifth inning.

Oakland forced the extra inning with a run in the bottom of the ninth.

In other American League action, Don Money continued his record-setting string of errorless games. The Milwaukee Brewers third baseman played his 79th straight game without an error as Brewers edged Chicago White Sox, 6-5, at Milwaukee.

And Jim Mason tied a record by hitting four doubles as New York Yankees pounded Texas Rangers for 19 hits and a 12-5 decision.

In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers' ace reliever Mike Marshall got a rest as Andy Messersmith pitched a three-hitter to stop Philadelphia Phillies, 4-0.

Marshall, who earlier set a record by appearing in 13 consecutive games, has now pitched in 17 of the Dodgers last 20 games and has 57 appearances for the season.

Two of those came Sunday when he relieved Doug Rau in the eighth inning of the first game and Tommy John in the seventh inning of the second game as Dodgers swept a double-header from Montreal Expos. Marshall now has 13 saves.

Messersmith, who has allowed just six earned runs in his last eight starts, walked four and struck out eight to end Phillies' four-game win streak and earn his ninth victory in 11 decisions.

Lacrosse resumes tonight

COQUITLAM — A scheduled Western Lacrosse Association game Monday between Coquitlam Adanacs and Vancouver Burrards has been postponed until Saturday.

League-commissioner Colin Cruickshank said the switch was made to allow players from the Lacrosse Canada team which returned to Vancouver, Monday morning, from Australia, at least 24 hours rest before resuming WLA play.

The Adanacs visit the Burrards tonight and league play continues Wednesday with New Westminster Salmonbellies at Memorial Arena for an 8 p.m. game against Victoria Shamrocks.

Big ball for British Open

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — The Royal and Ancient Golf Club abandoned the little British ball Sunday and went over to the bigger American ball as compulsory for the 103rd British Open.

"The ruling is going to be good for the Yanks," one top competitor said amid the field of 154 players who take off in the Open Wednesday at Royal Lytham's windswept course, battered by gales from the Irish Sea.

The R and A issues its instructions in sharp rules declaring that "the 1.68 diameter ball will be compulsory" and that all players must hit a ball "not greater than 1.62 ounces . . . and not less than 1.680 inches in diameter."

It added, too, "there will be no velocity specifications."

The big ball was picked as a special choice after years of deliberations at the headquarters of the game. The R and A decided that players should use the big ball as a matter of routine in order to compete with the stars of the United States circuit.

Jack Nicklaus was picked by Britain's legal bookies as 5-to-1 favorite for the title he has won twice before.

Gary Player is the second choice at 7 to 1. Johnny Miller, who is the leading money winner on the U.S. tour with five victories, is 8-to-1, followed by Lee Trevino at 10-to-1 and defending champion Tom Weiskopf at 12-to-1.

Saanich Optimists in final

Optimists downed Esquimalt-Victoria, 14-6, at Bullen Park and will take on Cosmopolitan League of Gordon Head in the first game of the finals at 6 p.m. at Bullen Park.

Cosmopolitan can take the title with a victory, but if Saanich wins today a game would be necessary Wednesday. Cosmopolitan defeated Saanich, 4-1, in an opening-round game.

McDonalds rebound to trounce Surrey

Next game: Wednesday — Surrey at Coquitlam.

SURREY — Victoria McDonalds bounced back from a shattering defeat to post an impressive win Monday in Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League action.

McDonalds never trailed in posting a 16-11 win over Surrey Salmonbellies and the score flattered the host team as four of its goals came in the final three minutes when the decision was out of reach.

Beaten, 21-10, by league-leading Burnaby Cablevision on the weekend, McDonalds were a changed club Monday and it showed on the scoresheet.

Although league-leading scorer Kevin Alexander again topped the marksmen, he had plenty of help this time out.

The sharpshooting rookie fired four goals and drew three assists to run his points total to 101 for 16 games.

Veteran Mike Walsh also scored four times for the Bakers, captain Jeevan Dillon chipped in with three and Bob Cool had two goals. Ken King, Bill Marechek and Leigh Hegan were the other goalgetters while Norm Baker counted eight assists to move back into second place in the individual scoring race.

Al Benson (3), Rick Boucher (2) and Jack Fulton (2) were the only Surrey players to get more than one shot past goalkeeper Denny McLean, who played his best game as a McDonald.

About Islanders

Dave Ewert tops North Island golf

COMOX — Dave Ewert, an unattached pro from Campbell River, finished with a two-under-par 68 on Sunday to top the annual North Island Open, held at the Comox Golf Club.

That gave Ewert 139 for the 36 holes, and a four-stroke victory over Duncan amateur Bert Wright, who moved up a couple of notches with a last-round 70.

The next five places in the gross-score competition were filled by Victorians. Victoria-city and Vancouver Island-champion Cec Ferguson, the first-round leader with a 70, slipped to a 74 and had to be content with third place. Next came Marty Richards and Rick Kent of Glen Meadows, with 145 and 146, respectively, while sixth place was shared at 70, by Gorge Vale clubmates Ray Seymour and Grant Milliken.

Comox golfers took the first three net prizes. Fred Zaruk, a 15-handicapper, won the low net competition with 125, two strokes ahead of Danny Fremont (145-18) and three strokes ahead of Ron Ellis (154-26).

World Cup champions losing ace marksman?

Millions of West Germans celebrated their team's World Cup soccer victory Sunday over Holland but they were brought back to earth by Monday reports that star forward Gerd Mueller, 28, was quitting the championship squad.

At a Munich victory banquet hours after his tie-breaking goal helped West Germany to a 2-1 win and its first World Cup in 20 years, Mueller said he wanted to spend more time with his family and hoped he could "shoot my farewell goal in the Sept. 4 match against Switzerland."

Mueller, top scorer in the 1970 tournament, scored his fourth goal of the 1974 finals in the 43rd minute, seizing a loose ball and firing it low into the net. It was the kind of a goal that has made Mueller one of the world's ace marksmen and it helped most of the 80,000 fans jammed into Olympic Stadium recover from the heart-stopping shock of conceding a first-minute penalty.

Johan Neeskens shot the favored Netherlands into the lead after superstar Johann Cruyff had been tripped. But Paul Breitner equalized in the 25th minute from a penalty awarded after Bernd Hoelzenbein was brought down.,

Goalkeeper Sepp Maier and ironman-defender Berti Vogts, who shadowed Cruyff, were tested time and again in the second half when the Dutch attacked.

Cruyff, reported to be earning $2,000 a day, twice set up Johnny Rep in the closing minutes but both times the shot glanced wide.

Maier made two outstanding stops, a diving save against Neeskens in the 70th minute and a spectacular block of a Theo de Jong drive seconds later.

Following the final whistle, captain Franz Beckenbauer was presented with a new gold cup by West German Presidest Walter Scheel. The old trophy had been won for keeps by Brazil with a third victory in 1970.

The victory crowned 10 years of effort for manager Helmut Schoen, a tall, gaunt 58-year-old who guided his team to runnerup spot in 1966 and third place in 1970. West Germany previously won the cup in 1954 under Schoen's predecessor Sepp Herberger.

The 16 teams that started the tournament June 13 all took home more money than any team has drawn from the World Cup before, the organizing committee announced.

The tournament grossed from $29 to $31 million with ticket sales accounting for $12.9 million. Each team in the finals received $784,300.

Team manager Rinus Michels led his players down the aircraft steps followed by Cruyff. Laurel wreaths decorated by red, white and blue ribbons were placed around their necks.

Later Monday, the players were received by Queen Juliana at her palace in The Hague and they also visited Dutch prime minister Joop Den Uyl at his official residence.

College stars agree to back pro players

EVANSTON, Ill (AP) — The College All-Stars voted Monday to honor the National Football League Players' Association picket line and stated: "No negotiations, no practice; no contract, no game."

It could mark the first time since 1934 that the charity all-star game, scheduled July 26 in Soldier Field against Miami Dolphins, will not be played.

The announcement was made by Dave Casper, Notre Dame star, who said: "We are issuing one statement — we the all-stars, in light of a difficult situation, will honor the picket lines. We have signed an agreement to that effect."

It took the all-stars about 40 minutes to reach their decision after heated arguments in which shouting could be heard from behind the closed doors.

Prior to their vote, the all-stars heard from both sides of the NFL's labor dispute.

After Finks, general manager of Minnesota Vikings, emerged from the meeting room, John Hicks, Ohio State star offensive guard, came out and asked Finks and Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, to step into the room and debate both sides of the issue.

Garvey earlier had attempted to enter Finks' meeting and debate the issue, but Finks refused, saying: "You talked to them two hours last night. This is our meeting, called by us."

The all-stars' decision was a victory for the striking players' expressed determination to prevent any pre-season NFL games from being played until the strike is settled and a new contract signed.

The strike was called July 1 when 63 union demands remained unresolved in negotiations, but it centres on the players' demands for freedom, such as an end to the reserve clause, the right to veto trades, the right to negotiate with any team a player wishes, and a curbing of a coach's power to impose disciplinary measures such as curfews and fines.

It appeared Monday that a resumption of negotiations might be near, although the federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, which is overseeing the talks, made no announcement.

The owners have maintained throughout the negotiations they would not agree to the elimination of the reserve and option clauses.

Offensive-tackle Willie Young and wide-receiver Charlie Wade, both members of Miami taxi squad last season, joined veterans Henry Stuckey and Tom Smith and 40 rookies in the Dolphins' camp.

Field goal on last play wrecks rally by Lions

HAMILTON — B.C. Lions, who had climbed out of the hole dug by their numerous errors, Sunday had their pre-season record balanced at 1-1 by a last-play field goal.

It was kicked from 15 yards by Ian Sunter, and it gave Hamilton Tiger-Cats a 25-23 victory. A crowd of 21,258 watched the Canadian Football League clubs play their second pre-season games.

Jim Stoeckel, a rookie quarterback from Harvard University, took the Ticats from their 35-yard line in the 67 seconds remaining after Ivan MacMillan's third field goal had put Lions ahead for the first time.

Lions kept themselves in trouble throughout by being penalized 15 times for 119 yards, either stalling their own drives or helping Ticats put points on the board.

Hamilton led 3-0 after the first quarter and 12-6 at the intermission, then moved in front by 19-6 and 22-13 in the third quarter. Lions got close at 5:39 of the fourth quarter when they got their second touchdown, and they went ahead at 13:53 when MacMillan connected from 18 yards.

Sunter booted field goals from 37, 38 and 32 yards before he produced the winning three-pointer, and he converted one of the two Hamilton touchdowns. The major scores were by Tony Gabriel, on a 23-yard pass play with Bill Etter, and by Dave Fleming, on a one-yard pass from Etter.

MacMillan, who hasn't had a miss in kicking five field goals and seven converts in two games, contributed 11 points with his kicking — two converts in addition to the three field goals.

B.C. touchdowns were scored, both on one-yard runs, by John Musso and Lou Harris. Musso went over in the third quarter after he had moved the ball 60 yards on a pass play with Don Moorhead and Harris drove over after a blocked punt had allowed Moorhead to start only 35 yards away.

Karl Douglas, calling the signals for a rookie backfield, took the Lions from their 33-yard line in a race against the clock which was to be only a temporary success. He was stopped 11 yards short, and it became about 30 seconds too soon when Ticats marched back after MacMillan's go-ahead field goal.

Musso injured a knee late in the third quarter and didn't play again. He was sent back to Vancouver and will miss Wednesday's game in Ottawa, but Vancouver reports Monday said the injury was not serious.

Moorhead completed 10 of 18 passes for 152 yards and Douglas completed four of 10 passes for 56 yards. Both were intercepted once. Brock Aynsley, getting 35 yards, and Dick Bumpus, getting 42 yards, each made three receptions. Musso, held to 12 yards rushing in four carries, got 84 yards with two catches.

City clubs win two of three

Victoria teams won two of three B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League games played Sunday.

Esquimalt Teamsters doubled North Shore Indians, 12-6, at Esquimalt Sports Centre; Saanich E. J. Hunters trampled Richmond Roadrunners, 17-4 at Pearkes Arena; but Victoria Island Pacific Oilers were defeated, 14-8, by Vancouver Blue Angels at Memorial Arena.

St. Thompson scored four goals for the Oilers while Randy Jarman had two goals and four assists for the Blue Angels.

Junior league wants to change affiliation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League says the league will try to withdraw from the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association and come under the Western Canada Hockey League.

Dr. Arnold Lowden said Sunday that league directors will seek an early meeting with officials of the Western Canada League in an attempt to place the BCJHL under the jurisdiction of the WCHL.

Dr. Lowden said BCJHL directors feel there are more benefits from the WCHL than the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association and added that the BCJHL hopes to be out of the BCAHA before the start of the 1974-75 season,

The BCJHL president said the league is being cheated by the BCAHA and pointed to the BCAHA's opposition to the BCJHL's attempt to expand into Spokane, Wash., and the association's decision to create another junior "A" league on the west coast.

Sue Roberts scores first tour victory

GRAND ISLAND, N.Y. — Sue Roberts fired a three-under-par 70 on Sunday to win the $5,000 first prize in the Niagara Frontier golf tournament.

It was the first Ladies Professional Golf Association victory for the 25-year-old Ohioan, who went into the final round tied for the lead with Joanne Carner and Murle Breer and came out on top by two strokes with 213 for the 54 holes.

Mrs. Carner, who boosted her year's earnings to a leading $58,206, made a great rally after taking a four-over-par eight on the second hole but her finishing 72 was not good enough. She won $3,750 to continue her outstanding streak. She has won three times, placed second three times and was third once in her last eight tournaments.

Miss Breer finished third at 217, Susie Berning was fourth with 219 and Jane Blaylock and Jo Ann Prentice shared fifth place with 220s. Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., finished at 223 and won $800.

Nanaimo eliminates Comox

LAKE COWICHAN — Nanaimo edged Comox, 9-7, in 10 innings here Monday to stay alive in the mid-Island 14- and 15-year-oldsBabe Ruth tournament.

Nanaimo, which had a bye on Saturday, lost its first game, 7-2, to Duncan on Sunday. Kim Kaiser pitched a one-hitter for Duncan.

In other Sunday games, Comox blanked Port Alberni, 10-0, and Lake Cowichan defeated Campbell River, 11-7. Comox and Port Alberni are eliminated from the double-knockout tourney, which continues today with Campbell River taking on Ladysmith at 6:15 p.m.

Ruth leagues start play on Thursday

Victoria's three Babe Ruth Leagues will square off in the annual City and District 14- and 15-year-old all-star tournament at Reynolds Park, starting Thursday.

Defending champions Saanich Evening Optimists are the host league and will try to retain the title against Esquimalt-Victoria and Cosmopolitan of Gordon Head, in the double-knockout tournament.

Thursday's game is at 6:30 p.m. and action continues with games at 6:30 on Friday and Saturday and final games are set for 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. (if necessary) on Sunday.

Henley may survive financial troubles

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — The Russians won the Grand Challenge Cup for the third year in a row, but that didn't erase the relieved smile that spread through the 1974 Henley Royal Regatta.

Rowing buffs began the four-day run on the River Thames wondering whether the regatta, in its 136th year, was going to sink out of sight. But it appears Henley has weathered the financial storm and will keep going.

Warnings that this could be the last Henley were replaced by guarded optimism and plans to sell some of the regatta's luxurious river frontage for building development have been shelved at least for the time being.

Several experiments by the ultra-cautious ruling stewards were a big success, notably shifting finals day to a Sunday for the first time in the regatta's history.

The move was rewarded by huge, fast-spending crowds on Saturday and Sunday.

Henley's problem has been inflation, but supporters of the regatta's Edwardian elegance spent money here as if they were giving it life blood. The prices made even the upper crusts gasp, but still they paid up.

Auto-parking charges within a realistic distance of the course were $4.80, four times what anyone else would charge.

In the steward's enclosure, a fruit-juice cocktail, low in alcohol and only faintly chilled, cost $2.40 a glass—three times the normal price.

Another reason for the bumper crowds, however, was the introduction of a new special race for schoolboys which attracted all the mums and dads bent on seeing little Johnny at the big scene.

The Soviet Union's Trud club won the Grand Challenge Cup by beating the British national eight in 1:34 and a half-length margin at the end of the one mile 550-yard course.

The Russians also took three of Henley's minor prizes.

Canadian Dolphin Swim Club of Vancouver was first with 2901 points, Olympians had 628 points, HYACK swim club was third with 400 points and Victoria Flying Y was seventh with 164 points scored in the Vancouver Aquatic Centre pool.

Karen Rushcall of Olympians with a victory in the 200-metre butterfly was the only Victoria swimmer to finish first, but Elizabeth McDonald of Flying Y was second in the 100-metre backstroke and Olympians 400-metre freestyle girls' relay team earned a second.

Leslie Cliff of Vancouver was the top individual performer with four victories, while Stephen Pickell of Vancouver won three events and set a national-age group record of 2:29.77 in the 200-metre individual medley.

Susan Shipiruk of Olympians swam the 800-metre freestyle in 9:44.6 to qualify for the national swim meet for the first time and Rob Grundison with a 200-metre breaststroke time of 2:42.86 earned his second qualifying mark.

The national championships will be held Aug. 12-15 in Ottawa and so far Marg Meyers, Carolyn Rushcall, Cathy Rushcall, Karen Rushcall, Kim Rushcall, Susan Shipruk, Judy Thompson, Rob Grundison, Bill Mollard and Greg Stone of Olympians have qualified and Alison Noble and Elizabeth McDonald of Flying "Y" have qualified.

Wakeham second at Kamloops

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Dave Barr of Kelowna set a course record Saturday and went on to win top money in the Kamloops Overlander Open golf tournament during the weekend.

Barr collected $800 for two-round total of 139, including a record-setting 67 Saturday. Bill Wakeham of Cowichan, who was tied with Barr after the first nine holes Saturday, split second-place money with Mark Ludeman of Richmond, each with 145 for $550.

Martlet in step with soft line

By BILL LEVER
Colonist Reporter

It happened suddenly, almost simultaneously, on campuses across the continent. The day of the movement — of protests and crusades which not long ago were virtually synonymous with student life — has come to an end.

The University of Victoria was never really a hotbed of anything but even there activism was reflected in the usual things like student demonstrations and in anti-war and ecology crusades; and in its campus newspaper, The Martlet, which for several years patterned itself after the then-flourishing underground press and prided itself on radical chic and four-letter frankness.

Last year's Martlet, symbolizing what some people are calling a return to normalcy, decided to play it straight and get back to the basics of scholastic journalism — covering campus news, with admittedly less flamboyance but a lot more credibility.

This year's paper, according to new editor Creg Middleton, will be even straighter.

Middleton, who put out his first issue this week, says he has a specific theme and goal for The Martlet — professionalism.

"There's not much point in running a student newspaper like some kind of entertainment club," he says. "And it's not just an ego trip for the editor and his clique."

The Martlet's attempt to achieve higher standards has already started paying off — not only for readers who got a better product but also for several graduating staff members who quickly landed jobs on commercial newspapers.

It's a far cry from the radical, university paper sometimes pornographic of a few years ago, whose editor boasted in print that he would never be hired by the Victoria dailies.

Besides using the paper itself as a training tool, Middleton plans to invite working newspaper people to conduct seminars on campus.

The paper will also have a potentially valuable ally in a journalism course to be taught, for the first time, by a professional journalist.

The instructor, former Colonist reporter Bill Thomas, says writing for The Martlet will be optional, but he expects that any student considering a newspaper career will welcome the opportunity of getting his work in print.

"The newspaper business is a trade," Thomas says, "and you only learn a trade one way — by doing it.

"We won't have any textbooks other than the Canadian Press style book. You can read 500 books on plumbing and still not know how to plumb a house.

"What this course will do is try to teach people how to write clearly and concisely. You can't really teach them, but you can show them and help them."

Having The Martlet will make the course more than an artificial academic exercise, Thomas added.

And, as Middleton says, the course is another forward step for a straight paper that's trying to serve its community and prepare its workers for the real world.

Boy survives 24,000 volts

BARKING, England (CP) — Desmont White, 9, received a 24,000-volt shock and was thrown 24 feet after touching a railway electrical line. But the boy survived with only superficial burns. "It's quite incredible," said a doctor specializing in treatment of burns. Said Desmond: "I'll never go near the railway lines again."

Hong Kong vets ready to meet

The last convention of the Hong Kong Veterans Association of Canada to be held in Western Canada will start at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Ingraham Hotel.

Convention chairman Lionel Speller said Saturday the annual conventions, which started in 1948, will not be held west of Toronto again.

"It's a matter of expenses," Speller said. He added that the association's provincial branches will send delegates from distant points to future conventions but their expenses will be paid.

About 150 Hong Kong veterans are expected at this year's meeting which will be opened by Saanich Mayor Ed Lum.

The veterans belonged to either the Winnipeg Grenadiers or the Royal Rifles of Canada regiments and were captured by the Japanese on Christmas Day, 1941, and kept prisoners for nearly four years.

"There were 1,998 soldiers and two nursing sisters in Hong Kong and between the war and prison camps, 598 died," Speller said. He said more died in prison camps than were killed during 18 days of fighting.

Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes, V.C., will take the salute in front of the Empress when the veterans parade to the Cenotaph to hold a memorial service in front of the legislative buildings at 10 a.m. Saturday.

A business session will be held Friday and see the film Lost in Error the only film made of the battle at Hong Kong.

Business starts rise under NDP

Premier Barrett released statistics Monday which show the number of businesses incorporating in B.C. has been steadily increasing since the NDP came to power in August 1972.

In the first six months of 1972, a total of 4,702 businesses had incorporated under the B.C. Companies Act. In the corresponding time this year, the number of incorporations reached 5,544. Last year, 5,238 businesses incorporated until the end of June.

Businesses in B.C. are prespering under our government, and the increasing number of incorporations shows that the people of our province have confidence in the bright future of this area," the premier said in a prepared statement.

The statement didn't give any information about how many businesses have folded during the period covering the incorporations.

McKinnon gives victor's cheer

McKinnon wins in a canter

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

The election day that began as a spitter hurried to a predictable close in Victoria riding without so much as a sputter.

The spitter was the grey, drizzly weather which helped to swell the 4 p.m. traffic jams and which in the end held out promise of brighter things on the morrow.

The sputter that never was came in the fortunes of the NDP's Peter James, a young conservative-looking laboratory instructor from the University of Victoria, who failed to make the expected challenge from the left.

For the rest, former Oak Bay mayor Frances Elford conceded defeat gracefully, barely one hour after the start of ballot-counting, her second buffetting at the polls in less than eight months.

Quietly victorious, incumbent Tory Allan McKinnon spoke of his low-key campaign suiting a riding in which the majority of voters were on fixed incomes and naturally inclined to favor a no-nonsense policy of price controls to curb spiralling inflation.

McKinnon said he spent marginally more money on advertising than he did in the 1972 election ($17,000 plus as compared with slightly more than $15,000 in the 1972 election) — and typically he attributed this slight rise to inflation.

Interviewed by reporters at his Vancouver Street headquarters, he conceded that on a national scale the price-and wage-control policy advocated by Robert Stanfield and the Conservatives had been a tragic failure.

"I think it's a wonderful policy but an extremely poor plank as an election platform, it's an extremely hard thing to sell," he said.

However, McKinnon predicted that within six months, rampant inflation would force the victorious Liberals to pinch Tory party policy and start income and price controls. The bitter irony would be that the Conservatives would find themselves voting for measures they had initiated.

He spoke of his party leader as "one of the smartest" politicians as well as being a "real gentleman, a rare thing in politics." Again, he said, the pity was that the election might mean the end of Stanfield's career as Tory leader.

A long way behind in votes, Frances Elford warmed to the Liberal victory but confessed herself bemused as to how to get across the Liberal message to voters in Victoria.

A loser in the Oak Bay mayoralty race last November, she viewed her defeat to McKinnon philosophically, predicting she may run again federally although her municipal career had undoubtedly come to an end.

"Victoria has five or six times the national average of fixed income residents," she noted. "Obviously they pinned their hopes on wages and price controls."

She warned that the lack of a Victoria MP on the government side in Parliament could make things hard for the local person to approach the federal government "in small ways."

One of Mrs. Elford's hopes was that female MPs would increase their numbers from the five who were elected in 1973.

Mrs. Elford welcomed the defeat of NDP leader David Lewis at the hands of a woman Liberal. "It's wonderful — I wish I had her technique."

New Democrat Peter James said his third place finish behind the Liberals had nothing to do with any backlash of voters disenchanted with provincial NDP politics.

He speculated that what appeared to have happened Monday in Victoria was that "some of our support went to the Liberals in an attempt to oust the Conservatives."

In the 1972 federal election, the NDP's Flemming Hansen was only slightly more than 1,000 votes behind the Liberals' David Groos. This time the NDP total was about half that of the Liberals.

Trailing a long but cheerful way behind was 63-year-old Marxist-Leninist candidate David Danielson, a contract plumber, who at presstime was very hopeful of achieving his target of 200 revolutionary votes. "I feel a lot younger tonight than I have for quite a long time," he said.

Never a doubt about this one

Early returns established a trend that never wavered as Progressive Conservative Allan McKinnon swept poll after poll to win a second term as Victoria member of parliament.

In this election as last, Conservative strength came from all parts of the riding, with a 75.6 per cent turnout of voters putting Allan McKinnon on top in 282 of the 290 polls.

Although Mrs. Frances Elford, the Liberal, was on Oak Bay council for 10 years — and mayor until November — she did not place first in a single poll in that municipality. The eight polls she did win were scattered through Victoria West, James Bay and central Victoria.

New Democrat Peter James did not finish first in any poll, though he did manage second place in several parts of James Bay and Vic West, traditionally strong for the NDP.

The party's vote total was down by several thousand from its standing in 1972, and the decrease reverses a decade-old trend that had until now seen NDP support here rise consistently each election.

Tories' win low-key in Saanich

There was good news and bad news for supporters of the major political parties in Esquimalt-Saanich last night, and the atmosphere at party headquarters reflected the feelings.

Both Liberal and Conservative candidates kept their smiles firmly fixed as they watched personal fortunes offset by party results, and even Conservative Donald Munro's supporters were subdued in their reaction to his success.

Only at NDP headquarters was gloom firmly and thoroughly entrenched as Peter Smart, in his first election campaign, first saw his party leader go down to defeat, and then watched his portion of the riding vote slip far below the NDP share in previous years.

The traditional Tory riding remained firmly in the Conservative camp Monday night as voters swept their incumbent MP back to Ottawa.

Munro went into the lead as soon as the first poll was counted, and the results never changed as the riding's other 311 polls rolled in.

Early joy

The riding has been a Conservative stronghold since it was created in 1952. The only time it left the Tory camp was in 1968 when now-provincial Liberal leader David Anderson was elected on the crest of Trudeaumania. He held it for four years and in 1972 Munro was elected.

The voters Monday cast their ballots much as they have through the history of the riding.

Munro, happy to retain his seat, was unhappy about the national result.

He said Canadians will still get their price and income controls within one year, possibly before the end of 1974.

"It's simply that Trudeau was afraid to face the electorate with the issue," said Munro, "but he knows it has to come."

Noting reduced NDP support in his riding, Munro put it down to disenchantment with the provincial NDP, compounded by reaction to the party's support of Trudeau in the last Parliament.

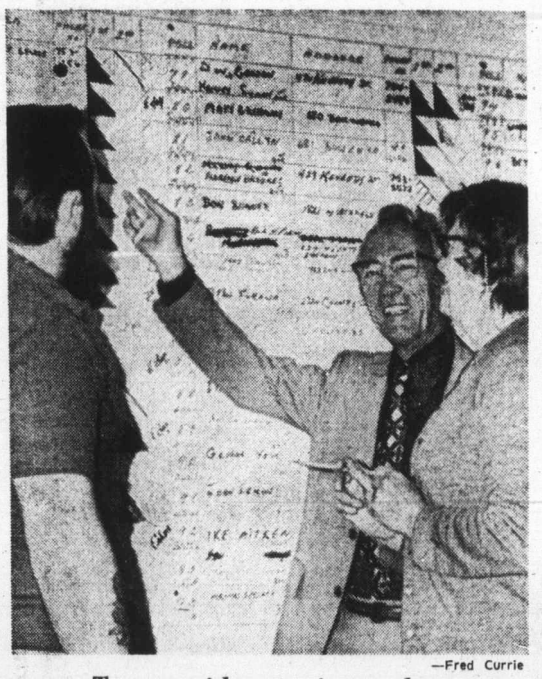

Anti-Tory

However, both Joy and Smart noted that NDP losses in the riding had been Liberal gains, and said the change had been more of an anti-Conservative vote than an anti-NDP vote.

Smart said it was difficult to tell if the NDP showing could be attributed to a backlash against the provincial NDP government.

"It's really hard to say if that is the case, or if it was simply a case of people assessing the chances of defeating the price and income control, and going with the party that had promised to avoid that course, and that had a chance of forming the government."

Provincial policies rejected, opposition claims

Chins up, Barrett tells supporters

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

The crushing defeat suffered by the NDP in British Columbia in Monday's general election triggered immediate reverberations on the provincial political scene.

Premier Barrett, disappointed by the results, called on NDP supporters not to be disheartened, while his opponents predicted an early demise of the provincial NDP.

Leaders of the provincial opposition parties were unanimous in attributing the voters' rejection of the federal NDP in B.C. to lack of confidence in Premier Barrett's provincial NDP government.

Opposition leader William Bennett called for an immediate provincial election.

"If the premier believes in democracy and in the wishes of the people, he must call an election," said Bennett, in a statement from his Kelowna home.

The Barrett government, Bennett said, was "clearly repudiated" in B.C. The premier's brief campaign trip in the east, he added, had "spread the disaffection of his government."

It was obvious from the results of the federal elections, Bennett said, that Barrett's policies weren't wanted in B.C.

The outcome of the election, he said, was encouraging for the Social Credit Party.

"As you know, we stayed out of this election and our workers worked for all free-enterprise parties.

"It is clear our party will win the next provincial election," Bennett said.

Liberal Leader David Anderson, jubilant that Prime Minister Trudeau had won a majority, said he will aim for similar results in the next provincial election.

"We know now that we can take votes from the NDP. That's the way we will do it provincially and lick the NDP," Anderson said.

"We take on the NDP responsibly," he said, sideswiping the Socreds. "I can assure you that the Liberals will never align themselves with the Socreds or any other right-wing party."

Tory Leader Scott Wallace was not available for comment, but Hugh Curtis (PC-Saanich and the Islands) said the results of the federal election were the "worst possible storm warning for David Barrett."

The NDP's rejection in B.C. federally, Curtis said, was a sure sign of defeat for Barrett when he goes to the people next time.

He said it was obvious the voters had rejected Stanfield's wage and price-freeze proposal.

"But I think he has to be respected that he stood by it, even when there were signs that it didn't go over too well," he added.

In a television address, Barrett said it was clear the people of Canada wanted a majority government.

"But I'm proud of what the NDP has accomplished in supporting the Liberals, forcing that government to implement many of our policies," he said.

The vote, the premier added, was "indicative of a general disatisfaction with the political structure."

He said he hopes the Liberals will be able to lead the country adequately in the face of the serious problems that lie ahead.

"In terms of my own party, no one should be disheartened by the results. Our party has always gone up and down but has always existed," he said.

Asked whether he would consider the leadership of the national NDP should David Lewis, who was defeated in his own riding, resign, Barrett said: "I have no comment, I have a job here in B.C."

Sidney hackles rise at sewage takeover

Sidney will oppose any plans by the Capital Region to take over its sewage treatment plant.

The plant has been the subject of a "long series of communications" between the regional district and Sidney council since its construction a year and a half ago, Mayor Stanley Dear told council Monday.

Funded by the provincial and federal governments, the operation of the facility was granted to the regional district by the provincial government. The board then turned operational responsibilities over to Sidney municipality but retained supervision.

Dear described as unfair allegations by the region that municipal employees operating the treatment plant could not do it properly.

He said the board refused to allow the engineers responsible for the plant's construction to teach the proper methods of operation to municipal workers.

"I guess they hoped we would drown in our own sewage," Dear commented during the council meeting.

"They're railroading it through (the takeover of the sewage plant) regardless how we feel about it," Dear told aldermen. "I wouldn't object if it was done openly and honestly . . . instead of in this underhanded way of saying our men are incapable."

Operations responsibility of the plant was given to the municipality on a trial basis, Dear said, to be reviewed at a later date. Supervision was retained by the regional district because of Pollution Control Board regulations, he said.

Douglas victory not all jubilant

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — T. C. Douglas was jubilant Monday when he was declared elected in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding.

Douglas said Lewis, his successor as party leader, "fought one of the best (NDP) campaigns ever and my heart bleeds for him."

He described Lewis' defeat in his riding of York South as "a great tragedy for Canada and the New Democratic Party."

The future of Lewis as party leader will be up to Lewis himself and the party's national committee, Douglas said.

He added that the NDP is "not short of bright young leadership candidates."

Douglas was clearly the winner when 262 of the 308 polls in the riding gave him 16,273 votes compared with his nearest rival, Donald Taylor, of Duncan, a Progressive Conservative, who had 14,386. Ray Kane, Liberal, had 8,419, and Ernest Knott, Communist, had 223.

Douglas said the over-all majority gained by the Liberals showed "the people wanted a majority government."

He said everyone had expected the Liberals to win heavily in Quebec but he was surprised they had done so well in Ontario.

He speculated that people voted for the Liberals there because they "knew the Liberals would sweep Quebec and to get a majority they felt they had to vote Liberal."

Douglas, who had earlier said this would be his last effort for public office, said he may now have to revise his plans. He said this would depend on the NDP's situation "at the time."

"I don't want to run again," Douglas said. "In fact, I didn't want to run this time but the election was called too soon to get another candidate ready.

"That decision will now have to be made at a later date."

Apartments pass despite protests

Over the protests of residents, Saanich council approved rezoning for two 49-unit apartment buildings at public hearings Monday night.

Ald. Mel Couvelier warned residents near the intersection of Quadra and McKenzie to "reconcile themselves to mounting development pressures."

Strongest objections to the rezoning from single-family residential came from John Green, of 1008 McKenzie, whose home will be "landlocked" by the two proposed developments.

Green said he had understood "it was not the policy of Saanich to isolate homes," but Couvelier said Green was landlocked because he had chosen not to sell to one of the developers.

One development, at 1011-1014 McKenzie, had been reduced from 69 to 49 units at the suggestion of Ald. William Noel. Only alderman to vote against the revised proposal was William Campbell.

The other development was proposed for 1.14 acres at 1002 McKenzie.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: We have a four-month-old baby who is very cute. She has a darling personality, is very friendly and always smiling.

The problem isn't the baby's, its mine. I hate it when people try to touch her. Especially if they appear to have a cold. Sometimes they have just coughed into their hands and then they want to put their germy fingers on my child's face. It drives me wild.

Salespeople who handle dirty money all day are the worst offenders. How do they know who was the last one to touch that money? He or she might have had some terrible disease. Please print this letter so the stupid "touchers" can see it. My relatives all know how I feel. It's the strangers I need to reach. — Hands Off.

Dear Off: Your preoccupation with germs goes beyond a mother's natural concern. It's sick. Babies build up an immunity to a variety of diseases by normal exposure. The child who is raised under a glass bell will have very little resistance. Please discuss this with your pediatrician and hopefully he can remove this klinker from your thinker.

Dear Ann Landers: If you print this letter I will love you to my dying day.

Dear Mail Advertiser: I am not your "Dear Friend," and I don't want to be addressed as "Resident" or "Occupant." Please get lost with your free samples, coupons, bonus gifts and pre-clearance specials.

My mind boggles at your logic. I am 26, yet you plead with me to purchase a retirement cottage in Arizona. I am single, but you suggest I "talk it over with the Mrs." I have twelve thumbs, and you urge me to send for assembly kits that would baffle Albert Einstein. I have two left feet, yet you promise me I'll be another Nureyev if I sign up for ten dancing lessons. I live in a mobile home and my mailbox is bulging with offers to build a basement or remodel my attic.

You create additional work for an already over-burdened postal department that can barely sort the billions of pieces of serious mail. Postmen have enough to do without lugging tons of unwanted junk to people who consider it an invasion of their privacy. May your computer develop a double hernia. — Over-Garbaged In K.C.

Dear O.G.: Go ahead and love me to your dying day, but don't expect your letter to change anything. Millions of people like mail offers, and that's enough to keep those cards and letters comin'.

Candy gift brings death

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The body of a four-year-old boy, last seen late Friday getting into the car of a man who had bought him candy, has been found inside a refrigerator behind an abandoned house.

Police said there were no signs of violence on the body of the boy, Ricardo Manon.

Babies do try to speak in first weeks

LONDON (UPI) — Mother knows best — babies do try to speak when they are only a few weeks old.

"I'm sure he was about to say something," says the proud mother smiling into the gums of her infant.

Until recently scientists would have put this down to maternal pride. Now, new research tends to show that baby has a built-in ability to use the world around him including the people in it.

The old theory that babies have to learn the rudiments of social interactions through exposure to adults is no longer as rock-ribbed as it used to be.

An article in New Scientist has developed this theme.

Dr. Colwyn Trevarthen, instructor in psychology at the University of Edinburgh said he started with the premise that the newborn human had too large a brain for the small amount of work it was called upon to do in classical theory. Using television and film and other modern recording techniques, he says he soon obtained data that the size of the brain was functional to its early purpose.

"Most remarkable," he said, "were indications that infants of a few weeks of age were showing signs of intentions to speak and that soon after this they were entering into well-organized, sometimes even witty or humorous, conversation-like exchanges with adults." By this he meant gestures and facial expressions.

Trevarthen said detailed analysis of films of two-month old babies showed activity which he labelled "prespeech — because both the context in which it occurs (i.e. responding to words spoken by mother) and its form indicate that it is a rudimentary form of speaking by movement of lips and tongue."

He said his team was now certain that the foundation for communication between humans is there at birth though this fact should not minimize the importance of further cultural development in the formation of language, both of speech and of gestures.

"It is remarkably useful at eight weeks when cognitive and memory processes are just beginning," he said.

The discovery of embryonic speaking in the social animation of infants, nearly two years before they use words, he said, reinforces the views of psycholinguists that language grows out of the inborn ability a baby has to communicate without the use of words.

London policewomen thriving on equality

LONDON (CP) — The women in London's metropolitan police force have been liberated and everyone appears to be happy except some British policewomen.

Britain's 47 provincial police forces have distinct men's and women's branches, with the women's limited in size and scope. In London, however, policewomen are equally eligible with their male colleagues for every job, with equal responsibility, equal rank and equal rights.

This experiment, introduced a year ago and unrivalled elsewhere in Europe, has won the support of policemen in London but is viewed askance by many policewomen outside London.

"After the first shock, men have taken pride in the scheme," said Shirly Becke, one of London's top policewomen. "But there isn't much enthusiasm among policewomen outside London because it means competing with men for every job. Abolition of the women's branch meant the abolition of women's jobs. Now everyone is looking at London to see if we fall flat on our faces."

London's policewomen, however, are thriving on equality.

Mrs. Becke is the first woman commander, one among 13 men. Barbara Kelley, 52, is the first female chief superintendent in Scotland Yard's criminal investigation squad. Sheila Ward, 37, is the first station inspector, in charge of 27 policemen and six horses.

"I could have pushed Sheila out to traffic control when the branches integrated," said Chief Superintendent Peter Saunders. "But she wanted a job with responsibility outside the usual women's field, so I moved out a man to create this opening for her."

Inspector Ward, while making clear she never tried to be "one of the boys," stressed she could throw her weight — 130 pounds — about as well as most men.

"I've been confronted with a madwoman armed with scissors, a prostitute with a knife and a six-foot fighting drunk," she said. "They didn't come quietly — but I made them see things my way . . ."

The irregular, unsocial hours policewomen work often mean cold dinners — and cold beds — for 9-to-5 husbands but the girls say this doesn't disturb the peace at home.

"The problems of being a policewoman aren't really serious," said a young wife in the London force. "Most men are quite capable of frying an egg or two."

"I never ask questions about her work," he said. "She has many secrets to keep and it wouldn't be fair."

Women were admitted to the British police force in 1919 to look after women who came into custody. As late as the 1940s, however, women detectives were tethered to three tasks — dealing with female shoplifters, taking statements from women and children who had been sexually assaulted and investigating thefts in women's lavatories.

Today there are women in every section of the London force except the river police.

"Dragging bodies out of the Thames isn't very appealing," said Commander Becke, whose career has spanned dealing with blackmail, vice rings, murder and fraud.

A group of fourth graders in Washington were given a first aid quiz recently and their answers revealed something I also suspected . . . children under 12 are not only injurious to your mental health, they can fix it so you can visit that big utility room in the annex.

For head colds: Use an agonizer to spray the nose until it drops in the throat.

For nose bleed: Put the nose lower than the body.

For snake bite: Bleed the wound and wrap the victim in a blanket for shock.

For fractures: To see if the limb is broken wiggle it gently back and forth.

For asphyxiation: Apply artificial respiration until the victim is dead.

The over-simplification of treatment has never failed to amaze me. Several years ago our son announced he wanted to be a babysitter.

Frankly, I couldn't trust the kid to turn off the sprinkler, so I summoned him to the kitchen one day and said, "What do you know about babies?"

"What's to know?" he shrugged.

"For openers, what would you do if the baby swallowed a coin and started to choke?"

He thought a moment, "What denomination?"

"What difference does that make?"

"If it was a quarter, I'd go for it, but a penny, I'd just write it off."

"Then I'd never give it another banana again."

"I know that! But assume you had and it is choking."

"I'd get the vacuum sweeper nozzle and suck it out."

"Where did you, in all of your life, get such a harebrained, stupid, idiotic idea like that?"

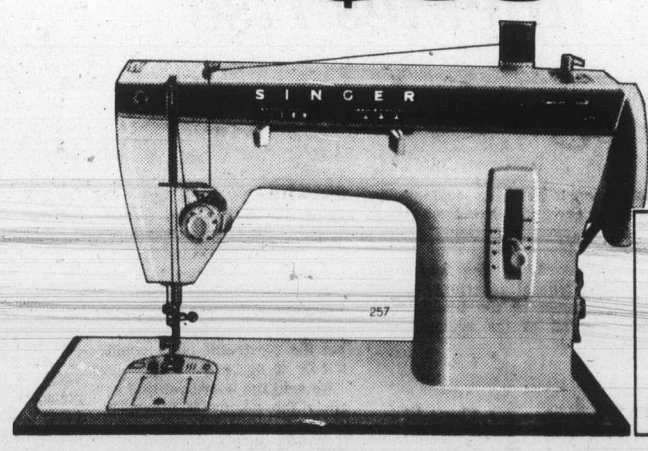

"From you: You used a sweeper nozzle when I stuck a piece of popcorn in my ear once. And don't worry, Mom. After all, I am 11 years old."

Memories still beat computers

By BARRY BRANFORD
Colonist-Gemini News Service

Millions of dollars are being spent pepping up the elephantine memories of complex computers. But recent research into the mechanics of mere mortal memory show that fallible though it may be, it is far more fascinating than anything science can conjure up.

Studies by teams of psychiatrists have disclosed there is more to remembering your partner's birthday than just tying a knot in your handkerchief.

Some of their conclusions may surprise you. For instance.

How far back can you remember?

If you think you can recall throwing things out of your playpen, maybe you are not imagining things at all. Because, say the experts, it is not unusual for first memories to go back to early infancy.

By tracing incidents in a person's life from baby days to adulthood, psychiatrists have been able to confirm it is common to retain mental images of things which happened at the age of two — or even earlier.

Often, however, childhood memories play tricks. Things we thought happened never happened at all. "The process of introspection is complicated by hearsay, dreams, or just wishful thinking," explained a London psychiatrist.

Do women remember things better than men?

Women may have a reputation for being scatter-brained, but when it comes to detail they are much more on the ball than men. Forgetfulnes is not one of their faults.

Take note of the results of a comprehensive word-thought-and-object-association memory test applied to 600 men and women business executives in the United States. Women scored eight per cent higher than men, with an even more marked superiority in tests concerned with remembering faces, dates and names.

Is it true that your memory gets worse as you get older?

It is a fear most people have as they approach middle age. Usually it is groundless. Memory, like the rest of the human make-up, keeps pace with the demands of one's group. Tests show that the memory and mental faculties of 60-year-olds to 70-year-olds are excellent among nearly three-quarters of men and women — and likely to stay that way if they remain active.

In what circumstances does memory work best?

According to psychiatrist Dr. David Fink, it functions with maximum efficiency when you are lying down, or relaxing as completely as possible. So next time when you are trying to remember something and can't, remember to put your feet up. Muscular relaxation takes strain away from the mind and in turn, from the memory.

Stress, anxiety and nervous tensions are the chief reasons, say the experts, for temporary lapses of memory.

Does it mean you're not inteligent if you have a poor memory?

Not in the least. Studies show that people of less than average intelligence often have better memories than people with high IQs. The absent-minded professor isn't just a fictional character. He belongs to real life. Because many people who use their brains in an academic or creative way tend to forget about day-to-day details.

Do men remember a pretty face better than women?

Strangly enough, no. The University of Connecticut discovered in a survey of students that both men and women remember more about members of their own sex than the other way round.

The idea that a man sees a pretty girl for the first-time and carries a mental picture around in his mind is a fallacy. The survey showed the men were rarely able to remember the color of their girl-friends' eyes.

There are various theories, like imagining your mind is a library, and tucking away facts and figures on the shelves . . . thinking in terms of mental pictures . . . using combinations of word-associations.

But how do you find the right one at the right time? The experts don't know, other than to suggest that you tie a piece of string round your finger, turn the clock the wrong way round, or do anything out of the ordinary which will set your mind systematically ticking.

It is comforting to know that, as one learned professor puts it, "this system is soundly grounded in the psychological principle".

But he didn't say what to do if you forget why you tied a piece of string around your finger.

Salads are good eating – and good value

When the living's easy, so are the meals

Salads' summer secret

In the summertime, when the living is easy, it's sometimes hard to get down to planning meals.

Yet with all the good things summer brings us in the way of food, extra special meals should and can be the easiest part of our easy living. Salads are the secret that make it possible.

They make ideal dishes . . . temptingly fresh and attractive all-on-one-plate meals to whet hot-weather appetites.

EGG SALAD IN TOMATO STARS

6 hard cooked eggs, chopped
¼ cup diced green pepper
½ cup chopped celery
⅓ cup thinly sliced green onions
1-2 tablespoons prepared mustard
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼-⅓ cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
6 medium tomatoes.

Combine all ingredients except tomatoes. Chill. Turn tomatoes stem end down; cut each one not quite through in 6 equal sections; spread apart. Sprinkle with salt, fill with egg salad. Garnish with parsley. 6 servings.

TOSSED GREEN SALAD

¼ package raw spinach
2 stalks celery, sliced
8-10 radishes, sliced
½ green pepper, sliced
Onion rings and chopped green onions
2 tomatoes, cut in wedges
½ sliced or shredded carrots
½ cucumber sliced.

In a salad bowl, tear lettuce and spinach into bite-sized pieces. Add remaining ingredients and toss salad well. Two to 3 minutes before serving, pour oil over salad and toss to coat ingredients well. Add seasonings and toss again. Add vinegar toss well. Taste salad and add more seasoning and vinegar if desired.

OIL AND VINEGAR DRESSING

½ cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon garlic powder (or to taste)
2-3 tablespoons wine vinegar.

FRESH FRUIT TRAY

3 fresh peaches, peeled pitted and sliced
3 fresh pears, pared, cored and sliced
3 oranges, peeled and sliced
1 pint blueberries, washed and topped and tailed
1 pint strawberries, washed
1 pint raspberries, washed.

Peaches can be peeled by plunging fruit into boiling water for 1-2 minutes and then into cold water, skin will slip off easily. Brush pears with lemon juice to prevent browning. Arrange fruit attractively on a serving plate or tray. Serve with Mock Devonshire Cream. 8-10 servings.

MOCK DEVONSHIRE CREAM

1 4-oz. package of cream cheese
½ pint 35 per cent cream
2-3 tablespoons brown sugar

Beat cream cheese until softened. Blend in cream and whip until thickened. Stir in brown sugar.

Hospitals eye doctor freeze

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Hospitals here may prohibit any additional doctors from practising in the two city hospitals, says the Herald. In an article, the newspaper says a hospital committee of six physicians has recommended to medical staff at Lethbridge Municipal Hospital and St. Michael's Hospital that the number of physicians allowed to practise in the hospitals should remain at its current level.

Divorce changes coming?

TORONTO (CP) — Widespread acceptance of the 1968 Divorce Act which provided nearly a dozen avenues to divorce other than adultery has pushed Canada to the threshold of even more radical reform, says Ontario Chief Justice George Gale.

"There have been expressions recently that there should be divorce on consent," the 68-year-old Mr. Justice Gale said in an interview this week. "I'm not at all sure that that isn't coming to pass in the not-too-distant future."

Granted automatically by a judge when he is satisfied both sides agree to it, a consent divorce does not require one side accuse the other to start the action or be found guilty before it can be completed.

Mr. Justice Gale said he has no precise idea when consent divorces will become law in Canada.

"But further relaxation of some kind in the divorce laws is inevitable and it will come when acceptance of the present law is complete," he said. "That's getting pretty close."

He said he bases his opinion on the evidence of social change in matrimonial cases heard by the Court of Appeal he heads.

But he said he thinks divorce on consent may be "dangerous to society as a whole.

"For one thing, I would prefer to see people go into marriage with a little more than that ahead of them. And I think it would be particularly dangerous for the children or for other persons who might, for one reason or another, have been forced by circumstances to rely upon the union."

But he said he would be reassured if any law making marriage breakdown the grounds for divorce gave the courts power to divide matrimonial property equally and compelled one of the parents to support the children.

In 1960, 6,980 divorces were granted in Canada, 2,695 of them in Ontario, but by 1972, the last year for which figures are available, the totals had risen to 32,364 in Canada and 13,183 in Ontario.

Engineer launches fashion industry

Whiz kid paints it rich

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — A military scanning device used in aerial photography has led an Israeli engineer to launch a multi-million dollar fashion industry.

His work in the United States initially involved what he calls "color deciphering," intended to help aerial reconnaissance discover hidden objects.

The ultimate result was reducing to a few minutes the tedious work of painting fabrics.

Ephraim Arazi, 37, switched from military to textile electronics. It was chiefly a response to demand.

Approached by a group of United States businessmen in the textile industry, Arazi proposed an electronic designer which would replace drawing patterns by hand.

"The guys have gone bankrupt, but we went ahead and eventually succeeded by selling the invention to others," he said.

A native of Jerusalem, Arazi had a curious career. He failed in his high school but graduated as an electronic engineer from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Today his company, Sci-Tex, based in the seaside resort of Herzliah, just north of Tel Aviv, employs 110, producing $4 million in sales.

Sci-Tex's latest equipment is a set of computers which has a color television screen. A special electronic stylus draws the design directly on the screen.

"You then push a button and start production," Arazi said. "This machine will convert what you drew into a fabric in one minute."

A typical price for such a system is between $200,000 and $250,000. Those who buy it sell about $200 million a year worth of fabrics, he said.

Like an increasing number of sophisticated electronic industries in Israel, it is export-oriented.

"We sell wisdom to people who used to be the leaders in this field themselves, like the Germans and Americans," said Arazi, a former air force officer.

His company has gathered a team of Israeli engineers and technicians with degrees from recognized foreign universities who normally would have stayed abroad to work in aero-space or university research.

Technological developments were largely responsible for changes in the fashion industry. The traditional small family-owned businesses, where most work is done by hand, now must compete with electronically operated plants.

Since fashions change so fast, time is important.

Years ago, car owners didn't worry too much about saving money on gas. Not when the price was only pennies per gallon.

It's a different story today.

With sky-high fuel prices, you're probably already doing everything possible to get more miles per gallon from your car.

But better mileage comes only if your engine operates at maximum efficiency, which requires special attention to lubrication.

That's where Bardahl additive oil comes in.

By adding Bardahl to your car's motor oil, you enhance the lubricating qualities of the oil. Bardahl's exclusive "polar organic" formula does this by creating a tough film layer that clings to metal surfaces, reducing wear and tear on vital engine parts.

The results show up in improved mileage and better performance.

Treat your car to Bardahl soon.

For cars with less than 40,000 miles

For cars with over 40,000 miles

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

On July 23, in the year 1845, the potato crop was looking pretty good in Ireland. The early summer had been wet and a little cool, much as this summer has been. The potato plants grew lustily, with sappy, vigorous growth, and with excellent prospects for a good "lift."

This crop was of tremendous importance to the country folk, for the potato was the staple item of diet. Outside of a few pigs and scrawny chickens, the Irish tenant farmer had little to eat but his "praties."

A week later, on July 30, trouble appeared in the form of small brown spots on the leaves of the potato plants.

These spots grew larger and ran together, and on the underside of the leaves a whitish mold appeared, releasing airborne spores which spread the disease from plant to plant and from field to field with wildfire speed.

The infected plants rotted where they stood, turning to a slimy, putrefying mass in the fields. By August 3, not a single potato plant was left standing in the whole of Ireland.

Then followed the most terrible disaster ever to strike the Ould Sod — the Great Famine of 1845. Families literally ate grass, or boiled it to get a little nourishment from its juices. Even the soil from the fields was eaten.

In the five years that followed the onslaught of the blight, nearly a million died of starvation while 1½ million were forced to emigrate, mostly to the United States.

The disease is still with us, and when conditions are favorable it can strike with unabated fury, rotting the plants of not only potatoes, but attacking also the near-relatives of the potato — the tomato and the pepper plant.

Once the disease gets into the bloodstream of the plant, that plant is doomed, for no spray or dust can reach it.

The spores are carried by the wind, and the method used is to keep the potato foliage coated constantly with a material which will kill the disease spore as it alights on a leaf surface.

There are a number of sprays and dusts that will do the trick, most of them based on copper. If you have a sizeable potato patch, the fungicide spray known as Bordeaux Mixture is as cheap and as good as any.

Spraying should start before the foliage meets in the row, and a fine, clear day should be chosen for the job so the fungicide will have a chance to dry on the leaves.

Stir your Bordeaux Mixture into water at the rate of eight heaping tablespoonfuls per gallon, and strain through a cloth when you fill your sprayer to avoid clogging the nozzle with undissolved particles.

Repeat the treatment every two weeks until the crop is ready for harvesting.

For the backyard gardener with only a row or two of potatoes, it is hardly worthwhile investing in a pneumatic spray and going to all the trouble of mixing and straining a spray.

In this case, a proprietary potato-tomato dust is a better bet. This may be purchased in a puffer applicator, so there is no need to buy equipment for distributing the protective dust.

Or you can do as the Italian peasant does — put the dust in an old sock, hold it over a potato plant, and give it a whack with a flat stick!

Arthur Hoppe

WASHINGTON — Our nation having celebrated its 198th birthday, many Americans appear concerned about leader ship, or what there is of it.

"How come when we were a little country of three million souls we produced great men like Washington, Jefferson and Franklin?" asks concerned American, "But now that we've got 200 million to choose from . . ."

Fortunately, the problem is being attacked vigorously. The Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, for example, has opened a candidates' school in Washington to teach political aspirants how to be great men.

The value of such schools can be illustrated by what happens to those shortsighted candidates who don't enroll in them. Take the case of George M. (Honest George) Washington of Mt. Vernon El Rancho Estates, Virginia.

Washington was universally admired by his friends and neighbors for his honesty and integrity. He was, that is, until he decided to enter politics. "He must be either a crook or a loser," they said, shaking their heads.

But Washington was adamant. "I must prove that honesty pays," he said firmly. "And I will do so by becoming first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of 50.1 per cent of my countrymen."

So he ran for president as a reform candidate. What elected him, experts agreed, was a 30-second television spot of his throwing a silver dollar across the Potomac — the caption reading: "Honest George will make your dollar go farther!"

But as Washington confessed with refreshing candor in his inaugural address: "I really hated that spot. All those producers saying, 'Try it again, George. C'mon, one more time. You can do it.'"

All might have gone well in Washington's re-election campaign had not his opponent made a blatant appeal for the ecology vote by accusing him of being a former juvenile delinquent who wantonly chopped down cherry trees.

"What you do, chief," advised his top advisor, H. R. (Bud Ehrlichman, "is say you assume full responsibility, but you knew nothing about it before March 21 and you'll voluntarily release all the evidence that proves you innocent."

"Honesty always pay," said Washington firmly. And he fired his top advisor on the spot, calling him, "the rottenest public servant I ever knew."

"I cannot tell a lie," he said on network television. "I did it. Furthermore, it costs $68 million to get president. So I sold mergers, ambassadorships and favors like every candidate before me. What's more, I cuss like a mule-skinner in private."

Provided I am granted immunity, Father, I cannot tell a lie."

Unfortunately, Washington had declined, as usual, to wear makeup before the cameras and the commentators commented that he looked "pale, sallow and, therefore, guilt-ridden."

The polls showed 62.3 per cent of the public thought he was guilty; 14.8 per cent figured he was "up to something;" while the rest considered him "some kind of a nut."

He was quickly impeached and unanimously convicted by congress and lives today, dishonored and disgraced, eking out a living by selling his wife's candy from door to door.

"Do you still think honesty pays, George?" she asked him.

"Yes, Martha," he said gloomily. "About $62.50 a week."

Sydney Harris

How can you get people to change so that they are willing to listen to what they don't care to hear? Because what we don't care to hear is generally better for us (and more useful) than what we care to hear.

I was thinking of this perplexity after a friend told me at lunch that he had attended two luncheons given by business groups the past week.

At the first, the speaker was blunt, factual and gloomy. At the second, the speaker was orotund, anecdotal, and comforting. The first speaker was received coolly by his audience; the second was enthusiastically applauded by his.

Nobody listens enough — or with enough of an open mind — to those who disagree with him, or even to those who paint a picture he is reluctant to consider. What we want when we hear a talk is confirmation of our views, when what we usually need is ventilation of an opposite viewpoint.

When Darwin was in the field, he put down in his notebook every piece of evidence that seemed to contradict his theory of evolution — because, as he later wrote, "If I did not, I would tend to forget the contradictory evidence, since what stays in the mind is whatever we find most agreeable."

The best, and most successful, general is he who has the best understanding of enemy forces, their deployment and resources; who knows where the enemy is strong and he is weak.

So, too, the most effective debater, as Lord Acton long ago pointed out, is he who can state the opponent's case better than the opponent himself can — and only then demolish it.

Most of us are bad proponents of our own case because we do not fully appreciate the case that can be made out against us. We seek those newspapers and magazines and even acquaintances that confirm us in our own prejudices and opinions, ignoring what is said on the other side, or dismissing it out of hand instead of making a reasoned analysis.

Thus, we spend a lot of our time knocking down straw men of our own creation — attacking opposite creeds at their most extreme or absurd points of weakness, and ignoring their genuine strengths.

Any general who so vastly under-estimated the enemy would not last long. (The rise of fascism in modern Europe is in large part the result of a refusal of the liberal and left-wing parties to believe in its appeal.)

Our enemies should help us grow, not make us shrink. They should force us to expand our minds, not close them. We must learn to welcome the clash of ideas as an opportunity to develop our own on-going dialectic, and not as a field of battle on which immediate victory is more important than ultimate truth.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Several months ago when Richard Harris was making 99 and 44 one-hundredths per cent Dead, he expounded on the evils of marriage.

"Wives drive husbands to drink," said Richard at the time.

Well, it so happens that Ann Turkel, a gorgeous actress, worked in the movie. You all know what happened. They fell in love and got married a few weeks ago.

He looked at Ann and came up with this profound observation: "Worse, wives drive men to abstinence."

Richard and Ann are on a nationwide tour plugging the movie because Richard has 10 per cent of the action. That will get stars on the road.

The Harrises now live on Paradise Island in the Bahamas. They bought Huntington Hartford's old house which is a dream mansion in a dream setting.

"I had to get out of England," says Richard. "They tax 98 per cent on unearned income and on top of that there's a four per cent wealth tax. How can you exist when you are being taxed 102 per cent?"

★ ★ ★

The story about Vic Mature caused so much mail and phone calls you wouldn't believe it.

Everybody wants to know when Vic is going to work again and how he looks.

He still looks like a Greek god and I imagine he would work if the right script came about.

Lots of people wanted to know why I didn't include the Androcles and the Lion story or the Los Angeles Country Club story and dozens more, mostly unprintable.

The Androcles story, a Hollywood legend, concerns the time Vic was playing a Roman centurion and his buddy Jim Backus a Roman private soldier.

During lunch break one day, Vic had to go to a legal office downtown where Hollywood characters in full costume are seldom seen. Vic signed his papers and with his perverse sense of humor suggested that he and Backus, complete with armor, go into a downtown pub for a drink.

Their appearance stunned the bartender and sobered up a few of the noontime customers, so much so that no one waited on them.

Vic pounded on the bar and bellowed:

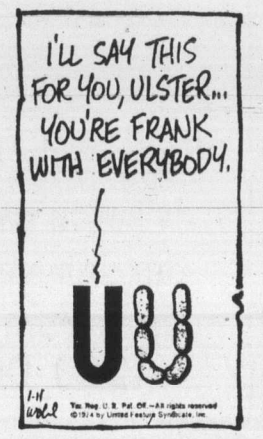

"What's the matter with this joint? Don't you serve servicemen in here?"

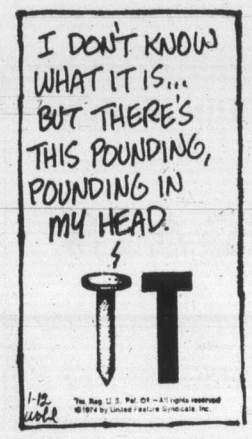

The Los Angeles Country Club, which is the club for Los Angeles and Bel-Air society, does not admit actors as members. Even Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, who associate with presidents and crowned heads, are barred.

Vic applied for membership and was turned down because he was an actor.

"I am no actor," said Vic to the board of directors, "and I've got 50 pictures to prove it."

Entrants must indicate if Colonist patrons

King Fisherman anglers are reminded to mark entry forms clearly as to whether or not they are Colonist subscribers.

While you don't have to be a subscriber to get in on the fun of the fishfest and for some of the trophies and Prince Crests, Colonist subscribers do get in on a great many hidden weight draws for prizes and for special trophies and Prince Buttons.

There is a special prize each month and at the end of the contest for female anglers and the entry form should also where clearly whether the angler is male or female.

Sometimes special awards are made to young anglers and they should be sure to mark their ages on the entry forms if they are 16 or under.

How long is it since you paused a few moments for another look at this province you're in?

Its grandeur. Its people.

Vitality.

Coast and islands and interior.

Opportunities.

It has so many things going for it that it's hard to catalogue them.

But they're all here.

A new $6 million plant is being constructed on the Surrey/Langley border by our Canadian Car (Pacific) Division which has outgrown its present Vancouver plant. It will produce a range of sawmill equipment, including the Chip-N-Saw lumber manufacturing machine which besides revolutionizing sawmilling in Canada has gained international attention and sales.

Our Vancouver Industrial Controls Division produces electronic and electrical control equipment and consoles for mining, forestry and sawmill operators, shipping and packaging industries.

It's good to be able to put Hawker Siddeley Canada knowhow to work in British Columbia. About 8,000 Canadians work for us coast-to-coast, some 550 here and the payroll is growing.

In Nova Scotia we have built hundreds of freight cars for British Columbia Railways. And there are more to come. Components for these cars, produced at our Trenton Works Division, are made by still other Divisions in Quebec.

There's also our Tree Farmer log skidders, Can-Car highway trailers and Orenda industrial gas turbines–made in Ontario and all hard at work in the forest, transportation and power industries of this province.

Canadians turning out products for Canadians... and for customers beyond our shores–that's Hawker Siddeley Canada.

So, as we said, it's good to be growing right here in British Columbia where there's a real future.

Maybe we've got the design, engineering, manufacturing knowhow or products and services you could use? The main ones are listed below.

Give us a call, or ask us to contact you–just pop the coupon in the mail.

We're moving. In a lot of ways.

bruce lowther

One of Victoria's leading broadcasters, Ron Robinson, is leaving CJVI shortly after years as program director and I'd like to say in print that I hope he takes Remember When with him wherever he goes.

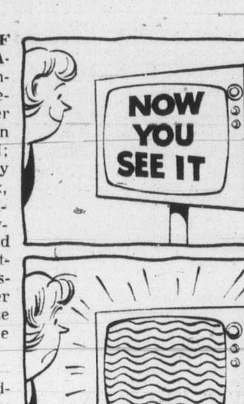

Robinson, 41, has been 23 years with one company and says that "I have no immediate plans . . . I'll take time to assess my future and seriously consider a number of alternatives."

Ron's Remember When nostalgia show on Sunday afternoons was always my CJVI favorite until it was dropped after the station went to country music. He has 2,000 hours of old radio shows in stock and it would be wenderful to hear them on some other Vistoria station.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's answer — Co-star time returned with Jennifer Jones and leading men Bogart, Beat the Devil; Charles Boyer, Cluny Brown; Gregory Peck, Duel in the Sun; William Holden, Many-Splendored Thing, and Joseph Cotten, Love Letters. Her second husband was producer David Selznick, whose biggest film was Gone With The Wind.

Today's question — Simply identify the leading ladies of Gene Kelly in Du Barry Was a Lady, Anchors Aweigh, The Pirate, American in Paris and Christmas Holiday. The answers Wednesday.

"Now you don't."

Tuesday Highlights

NOTE: PBS is again repeating Sunday shows on Tuesdays, like the Boston Pops at 7 p.m. and Journey to Japan at 10 p.m. on Channel 9. The mystery movies are Banacek at 7:30 on Channel 8, Faraday at 8:30 on Channel 5, Shaft at 9:30 on Channel 7 and Hawkins at 10 p.m. on Channel 12.

8:30 p.m.—The CBC will take an hour to examine the election results and tell you what you did. As if you didn't know—2, 6.

11:30—Laurence Luckinbill stars in And the Bones Came Together, a fairly good ABC mystery rerun—4.

CABLE 10—7:00 p.m., Rugby: B.C. Reps vs. Wales; 8:30, a new chartered accountants' series Running Your Own Business; 9:00, Outlook.

Tuesday Movies

12:00 noon — Anthony Adverse (1936 historical drama, long and outdated), Fredric March, Claude Rains, Olivia deHavilland. Some folks like this but I'm adverse to Adverse—13.

12:45—The Cobra (dull 1968 drugs actioner), Dana Andrews, Anita Ekberg. Brucie's Law: A cobra is a basket case—6, 8.

3:30—Come Fill the Cup (poor 1951 Cagney alcoholism drama). This movie perpetuates the fiction that all newspapermen are drunks, when in fact we are all sex maniacs—5.

3:30—Captain Newman, MD (fairish 1963 Gregory Peck heroics). Part one now, part two in 24 hours—7.

● 8:00—Detective Story (well-acted 1951 police drama), Kirk Douglas. Fine bits by Joseph Wiseman, young Lee Grant—11.

8:00—This Is My Love (Dreary 1954 soaper), Linda Darnell, Rick Jason and Faith Domergue, the dark side of Vera Hruba Ralston—13.

8:30—The Elevator (fairish 1973 suspense), James Farentino, Myrna Loy, many more. I'm not stuck on it—4.

11:00—Humoresque (1947 Joan Crawford meets John Garfield). Well, here it is again, the soaper with the shoulders wherein Jut-Jawed Joan strides into the sea as the fiddler plays—13.

11:30—Adam's Woman (so-so 1968 historical action), Beau Bridges. Saved by the presence of John Mills but only just—12.

12:00—Jivaro (1954 Rhonda Fleming breather)—6, 8.

1:55 a.m.—Vanquished (1953 John Payne western loser). Will this be the Nixon story?—6, 8.

Tuesday Radio

6:30 p.m.—New season for Let the Peoples Sing—CBU-FM (105.7).

8:00—CBC Tuesday Night stars Jon Vickers in the Britten opera Rape of Lucretia—CBU (690).

9:00—Start of a series of BBC prom concerts—CBU-FM.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Tim McCarver of the St. Louis Cardinals is one of the all-star catchers of modern baseball. Best known for his performance in clutch situations, McCarver holds numerous batting and fielding records. In one World Series of seven games, McCarver established a new record for most putouts by a catcher — 61.

McCarver can also make clutch defensive plays at the bridge table. His alert defence of today's interesting game led to the defeat of the contract. McCarver held the East hand.

Opening lead: Five of clubs

West led his fourth best club and dummy's jack held the first trick. At this point declarer could count on seven sure tricks and he could play either diamonds or spades to try for two more tricks. The diamond suit probably offered the better chance for the aditional tricks.

However, as the cards were placed, neither play would work Besides, declarer would have enjoyed the play which would "steal" from McCarver — he led a low spade at trick two.

Had McCarver played a normal second hand low, declarer would have made the hand. West's entry would have been knocked out before the clubs were established and declarer would score his nine tricks.

But McCarver saw his man break for second base. On dummy's low spade lead, McCarver rose with the spade king to hold the trick. His club return established West's clubs while West still had a spade entry and another fleetfooted declarer was thrown out trying to steal.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you information you give are the have to offer; the details and most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

Deflation hits with thud

Trouble came bumper-to-bumper Saturday night or early Sunday morning for car owners who parked their vehicles in 1300 to 1500-block Grant and on nearby Vining, near Fernwood, Victoria. Close to 200 cars received flat tires. Photos show string of deflated tires, and J. G. Heynsbroek, one of luckless owners, examining his automobile.

Suppliers strike settled

Teamsters Union Local 213 and Stewart and Hudson Building Supplies reached agreement on a new contract Saturday, ending an eight-day strike at the company's six Vancouver Island outlets, spokesmen for both sides said Monday.

The 45 men involved in the dispute returned to work at Stewart and Hudson's Victoria, Duncan, Ladysmith, Nanaimo, Parksville and Port Alberni stores Monday morning, Victoria branch manager Geoff Singleton said late Monday.

"Full operations will resume immediately," Singleton added.

Coast woods scene deteriorates

Leaders of nine coast locals of the International Woodworkers of America met in Vancouver Monday afternoon, as the situation in British Columbia's coast forest industry steadily deteriorated.

Eleven thousand B.C. coastal woodworkers were officially on strike and another 5,000 to 6,000 continued an unofficial strike, cutting the normal work force about in half.

About 5,500 coastal loggers, members of Local 1-71, officially went on strike at 8 a.m. Monday, joining another 5,500 workers, members of Local 1-85, who went on strike at midnight Sunday.

A further 5,000 to 6,000 members in the Duncan and Courtenay locals were off the job because of unofficial pickets who surrounded their Vancouver Island mills.

Up to half of the IWA work force of 32,000 have been refusing to work since the coast master contract expired at midnight, June 14.

As the situation deteriorated, Labor Minister William King was scheduled to meet with IWA officials today or Wednesday.

Associate deputy labor minister James Kinnaird said Sunday the meeting would attempt to break the logjam that occurred when IWA members last week rejected a proposed contract by 275 votes.

Under the IWA system of local autonomy, it is possible for any of the nine coast locals to call their own strike after the proper notice has been served.

IWA regional president Jack Munro has scheduled a conference of delegates from all coast locals for Friday. Munro urged all members to remain on the job.

But Ben Thompson, president of Loggers' Local 1-71, said there would have to be an increase in the 65-cent minimum hourly increase proposed in the settlement before most members would accept it.

"They are a little sick and tired at the delay, after a vote was taken and they rejected the settlement, in getting some talks going again with the industry," Thompson said.

Nearly all the loggers' local members have been off work since mid-June, when the coast master agreement with Forest Industrial Relations expired, and Monday's strike call made the walkout official.

This was also the case in Port Alberni, where first vice-president Ken Hansen said 5,500 members in the woods and sawmills, most of whom had already walked out, officially went on strike at Sunday midnight.

Leaders of most of the other coast locals supported Munro's call for members to stay on the job.

Fernwood spirit-lifter

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

One of the region's more run-down neighborhoods, the Fernwood or Springridge district, could be in for a badly-needed lift of the spirits later this year.

Teacher and would-be developer Ron Spence says he has an agreement with Block Brot. to buy the old Weston Bakeries building at Gladstone and Fernwood for $165,000, part of which he plans to convert into a neighborhood pub.

The present tenants — the Native Indian Friendship Centre and provincial human resources department — would continue to use the building, says the 32-year-old Spence, who also hopes to get a bank to locate there.

Spence, a defeated candidate in the last city election, and currently Fernwood Community Association president, said Monday he hopes to complete the purchase with former owners, Block Bros., in early September and open the pub a month or so afterward.

Already, he says, he has six partners prepared to chip in $3,000 to help renovate the planned pub section of the building — and is counting on four more to join him in that venture.

However, the main idea behind the purchase of the building, Spence claims, is to encourage economic activity in a district that already has its share of social problems and social services activity.

"We can't wait for business to come here, we need someone to invest in the area . . . people just don't seem to consider doing things here," he said Monday.

Spence points out that interest shown by the business sector in the district was often transitory and that in the last six months two of Springridge's commercial buildings had been bought by developers who had put them on the market again.

According to a government survey earlier this year, the area has the heaviest social work caseload in the capital region — about double that of any other district.

Spence says that while a variety of social programs had been introduced, there had not been a "parallel economic input" into the area: "I think that a community that's based around social services is not a realistic community."

He said the Fernwood-Gladstone intersection was a logical place for a bank and could encourage "good banking habits" among local people.

As far as the pub was concerned, the only real barrier appeared to be a clause in recent neighborhood drinking legislation preventing anyone setting up a bar less than one mile away from an existing one, Spence said. In the proposed Fernwood pub's case, both the Imperial Inn and the Douglas Hotel bars were less than a mile away.

"I'm not saying they're going to strictly enforce the mile thing," said Spence, who said it should be up to city council to say whether the location of a neighborhood pub actually served a need in that neighborhood.

He said the planned pub section in the Weston Bakeries Building had recently been sandblasted and would require only minor alterations before becoming a "local".

Smiles are bigger this year

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Jerry Gosley's Smile Show is off on its 22nd season, and the show that opened its summer run in McPherson Playhouse Saturday night has to be the best in years, if not ever.

The reasons are many: A first-rate cast; hilarious material for skits and blackouts; a fast pace that allowed for no lags even on opening night; fine dancing, good music and lots of color; Bebe Eversfield's direction and, of course, Gosley himself.

Opening night audience naturally included many old friends of the show, but the traditional opening roll-call disclosed visitors from as far away as London, England. As far as anyone in the house was concerned, the show could have gone for hours longer.

Gosley's Queen Victoria in her descending throne is not with the show this year, but another old friend, the British Army colonel now living in Oak Bay after years in "Indjah" is back — in a front box, naturally.

Much credit for the show's laugh-production must go to the original scripts, lyrics and music of Bebe and Jerry, Steve Ivings and Chet Lambertson.

Gales of mirth, for instance, swept the house by such bits as "The Andrews Sisters" — Barry Grimshaw, Paul Littich and Rick Simmons; and by a grand opera scene with Clare Wynters, Gini Lefever, Paul and Barry.

But those are only two examples. There were many more, including The Changing of the Guard and the Pot Boiler.

A great plus for the Smile Show is the versatility of its cast. Any one of its members can change (and often does in the wings) in seconds from wild comedy in weird costume to a completely straight role.

These last are mainly vocal, with Clare Wynters and Barry Grimshaw in particular offering lovely songs.

A colorful and skilful portion of the show is provided by the dancers, and the whole event is backed musically by Al Denoni with his Electrovox and accordion, and drummer Ben Manning.

Don't miss this Smile Show. It's there for you and your visitors, all summer.

Prairie lawyer on crown staff

Clarence Vause, 46, whose legal career includes a stint as a magistrate as well as periods as prosecutor and defence lawyer, Monday joined the staff of Victoria prosecutors under regional crown counsel J. W. Anderson.

The appointment of Vause resulted from the provincial government's takeover last April 1 of the Greater Victoria office of prosecutors and brought Anderson's staff to a total of eight, one short of the expected final expansion figure.

Before the takeover, Anderson's office provided prosecutors for the three criminal courts at 633 Fisgard and the two family courts at 2020 Cameron. It also staffed many higher-court trials at the Victoria Law Courts although outside prosecutors were retrained most of the time.

Cases before those courts came from Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Colwood for many years. Sooke was added a short time ago.

With the takeover, the jurisdiction of the regional crown counsel office has been set as the county of Victoria and the Law Courts.

This will mean more higher-court work for Anderson's staff, although outside lawyers still will be hired, plus new duties in the courts of Sidney, North Saanich and Salt Spring Island.

Anderson is expected to set up an office at the Law Courts while one of his staff takes over administration at the old municipal prosecution office on Centennial Square. This job could go to senior staff member Peter Birkett.

The three criminal-court prosecutors will be drawn from former RCMP member Gordon Macdonald, 35, Rick Isaac, 27, Vause and Nicholas Lang, 28, who is joining the staff in mid-August. Macdonald and Isaac joined in the past two years.

Mrs. Barry Riseborough, a former judge in Africa, will continue as a prosecutor in family court, where she was recently joined by new lawyer Trudy Brown.

Vause said Monday he was a magistrate for the more than three years in the mid-1960s in Swift Current, Sask., but returned to private legal practice by preference. He said he had done prosecution work and his Swift Current law firm was the busiest in town when it came to criminal-court defence.

PROVINCIAL COURT

People often throw coins in fountains and the question of who owns such coins after the throw may be tried Sept. 6 in Victoria Provincial Court before Judge William Ostler.

The case involves Michel Mercure, 34, and Louise Dussault, 21, both of Thetford Mines, Que., who pleaded not guilty Monday to a joint Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200.

Defence lawyer Rodney Smith said during a discussion of bail that the two were travelling in Canada and had been in Victoria for one day when arrested.

Smith, appearing as Legal Aid duty counsel, said his clients claimed they "took 160 pennies from the fountain in front of the courthouse" and felt it was all right to do so. He indicated they sought money for food.

Ostler released the two on their own recobnition in the sum of $350 each pending their trial Sept. 6.

Bail of $1,500 was set by Ostler for Stephen Gordon Higben, 22, of Vancouver, on a charge of possession of a restricted drug for the purpose of trafficking and of possession of a narcotic Friday in Victoria.

Prosecutor Bruce McConnan said the first count referred to "approximately 110 hits of windowpane LSD, which is a fair quantity" and the second count to a small amount of marijuana.

Higben pleaded not guilty and Ostler set the trial for Aug. 19.

In the court section of Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre, a three-month jail term was imposed against Theodore Edward Stephens, 34, address not known. Stephens pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of a $39.95 stone totem pole April 12 from Victoria Souvenirs and Gifts Galore Ltd., 1013 Government. St. Jorre noted in sentencing that Stephens had a lengthy previous record.

Any questions?

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — This notice is in small print on the backs of gas bills here:

"All gas consumptions are reflected in gigajoules. Meter readings are taken in cubic meters, or in case of non-metric meters, to the nearest 100 cubic feet. One cubic metre of the gas supplied contains 0.0168 gigajoules, 100 cubic feet contains 0.04757222 gigajoules."

Boat explosion hurts two men

Two men managed to stagger to safety Sunday afternoon after what eyewitnesses called "a violent explosion" shook the 31-foot cabin cruiser Nomad at Oak Bay Marina gas wharf.

Victoria General Hospial officials said Monday boat owner Anthony Rose, 32, of 2344 Middowne, and George Gavel, 18, of 1655 Chambers were in good condition with second and third-degree burns to the arms and upper body.

Oak Bay police said the two were repairing a gas line aboard the boat at about 11 a.m. Sunday when the motor was started before gas was cleared from the bilge.

"There was a violent explosion," said a police spokesman. "The occupants came staggering out badly burned."

Marina workers had the fire out before firemen arrived. Damage was kept to the cabin and sleeping area and was estimated at about $1,000.

The Nomad was towed away from the gas wharf minutes later and barricaded at a vacant wharf, where the gas was drained from the bilge.

Clamps leave jaws bit stiff

NOTTINGHAM, England (CP) — Mrs. Shirley Tuner, 36, whose jaws were clamped together for more than five months in an attempt to cut weight, lost about 90 pounds as a result of her forced reduction in food consumption. But she discovered after removal of the clamp that she couldn't move her jaws. Doctors believe it will be two months before she'll be able to eat in ordinary fashion.

Ukraine folk frolic

Ballet, as more and more people are coming to realize, is narrative in dance form. The dancers tell the audience a story — and few companies have done so with greater success than the Yevshan Ukrainian Folk Ballet Ensemble.

This company, all of Ukrainian descent, came to Victoria and McPherson Playhouse Sunday night from Saskatoon, where it was established in 1961.

It all began when Miss Nadia Pavlychenko conceived the idea of forming a dancing group which would offer young people the opportunity to learn Ukrainian folk dancing in its finest form.

She received enthusiastic support, with about 30 girls and boys forming the original Yevshan Dancers. Their first public performance was on April 30, 1961.

Interest and support have grown through the years, with the dancers performing as far from home as in Montreal at Expo 67.

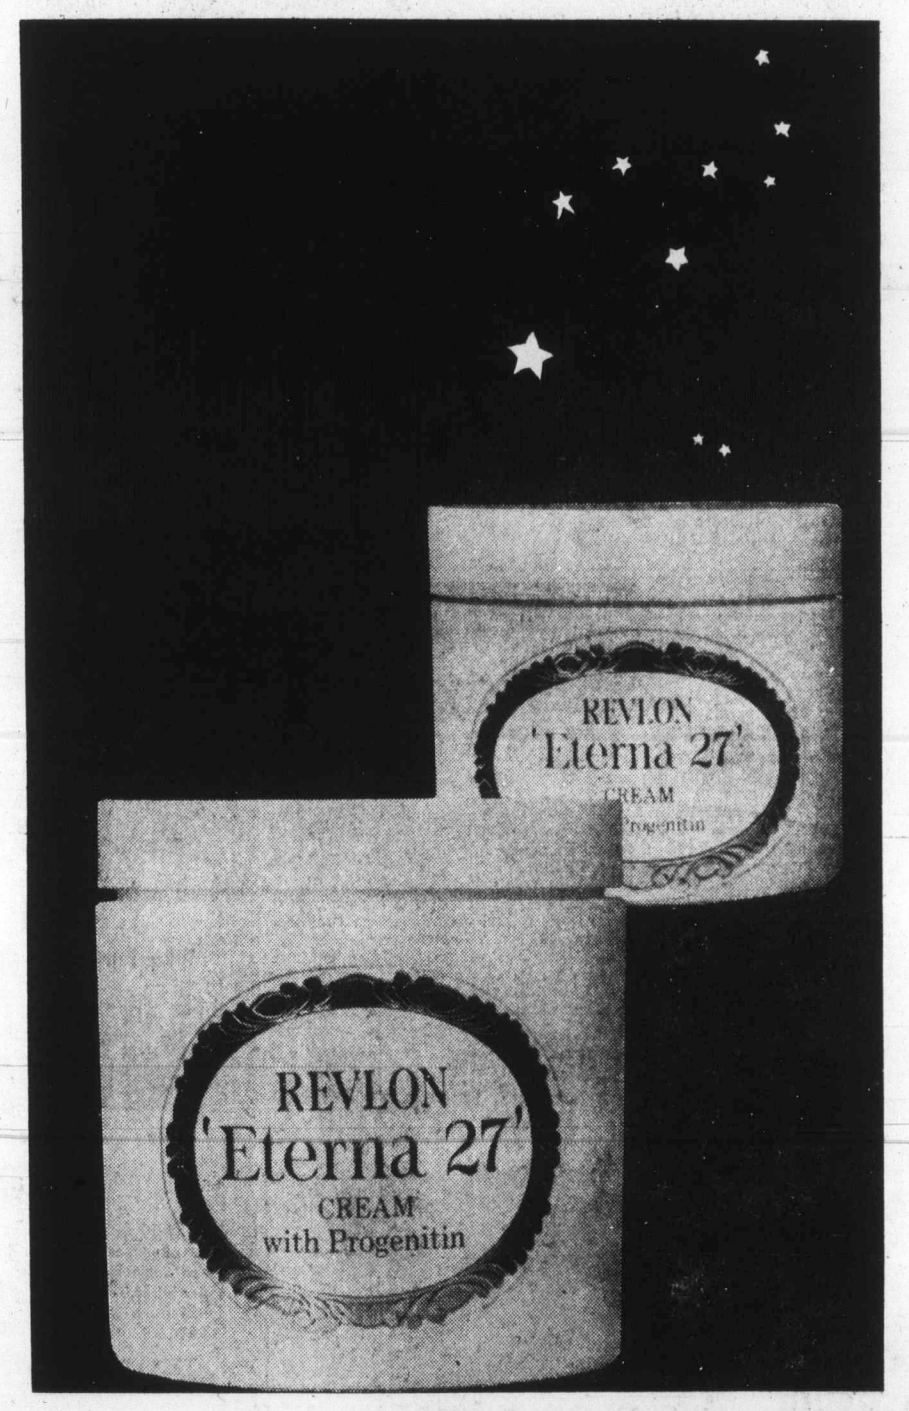

Choreographers of Ukrainian origin have created dances for the ensemble, and it was one of these, The Legend of Yevshan Zillya, that a good house saw at the McPherson Sunday.

The legend allows the dancers to explore the whole range of their native folk dances and this company does so with notable success. There may be some similarity in movements, but there is no monotony.

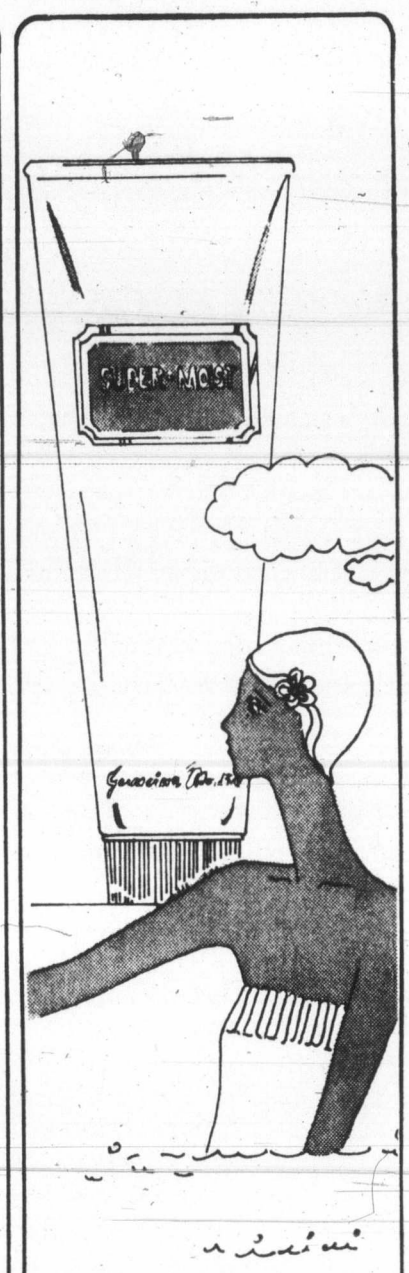

The young dancers clearly enjoy what they're doing, and pass that enjoyment to the audience — here, a very happy house.

Ontario turnaround lifts Trudeau to power; NDP, Socreds cut back

Grits break NDP hold on Comox

● Island riding stories, Page 15

Three of Vancouver Island's incumbent MPs were returned in Monday's general election but at press time it appeared the New Democratic Party was about to lose a seat it had held for 17 of the past 22 years.

The upset came in Comox-Alberni where Liberal Hugh Anderson appeared headed for victory with 12,020 votes in counting at 10:30 p.m.

His nearest rival, Alan Lazerte (PC), had 10,921 votes compared with Donald Barker (NDP), 9,627, and Mark Mosher (Communist), 545. The seat had been held by Tom Barnett, New Democrat, who did not run in this election. Barnett had held the riding for 17 of the past 22 years.

T. C. (Tommy) Douglas (NDP) won in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands but his 1972 majority of 15,305 votes was slashed by a strong challenge from Conservative Donald Taylor.

With 262 polls counted out of 308, Douglas had 16,273 votes, Taylor 14,386, Raymond Kane (Lib.) 8,409, and Ernest Knott (Communist) 223.

In Victoria riding, Allan McKinnon (PC) swept to an easy victory with 24,366 votes when 276 of the riding's 290 polls had been counted. Frances Elford (L) had 12,939 votes, Peter James (NDP) 6,542, and David Danielson (Marxist-Leninist) 191.

In Esquimalt-Saanich, with 180 of 312 polls reporting, Conservative Donald Munro had collected 14,904 votes, compared with 8,931 for Donovan Joy (L). The NDP candidate, Peter Smart, had 5,631 votes, Gerald Clarke (SC) had 466, and Barry Dean (Communist) had 99.

Margaret Trudeau plants victory kiss on husband at Ottawa press conference

Lewis loses House seat

TORONTO — Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal party won the wars on the Ontario battlefield in Monday's general election and captured a majority government — a goal he desperately wanted.

Conservative ranks were badly shaken, and the New Democrats not only lost their leader, but about one-half their troops.

The revival of the Liberals in Ontario surprised many observers who had been predicting a neck-and-neck race in the traditional battleground. The Liberals had won 19 more Ontario seats than in October, 1972, bringing their provincial total to 55. Both the Conservatives and New Democrats suffered losses there.

The trend was apparent even before Ontario returns came in.

Then, as expected, they swept through their traditional fortress of Quebec and had enough seats to see them through the relatively Liberal-barren Prairies.

In British Columbia, where the New Democrats were being hammered by the voters, the Liberals got their majority.

The setback for the Conservatives and New Democrats sparked immediate speculation about the future of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, who now has led the party into three general elections. He came within an ace of the prime ministership in 1972 but after Monday's losses, he is almost certain to review his leadership.

He would not comment on that possibility.

"I will have to talk with officials of the caucus and leaders of the party," he said after learning the results.

The defeat of the 65-year-old Lewis might end his career in Parliament, which he first entered in 1963 after four unsuccessful attempts. But he said Monday night he would continue to fight for democratic socialism "so long as there's breath in me."

When the Liberal victory became apparent, Trudeau went before television cameras in Ottawa, thanked the people for bolstering his party, and promised that all his government's actions would be for the good of all regions. For the third time following a general election, he had to express disappointment about the low representation of Liberals from the Prairies.

Grits, Tories both gain

B.C. wallops NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party fell to a shattering defeat in B.C. in Monday's federal election as the Conservatives and Liberals each picked up seats.

With counting still proceeding, the Conservatives had won 13 of B.C.'s 23 seats, with the Liberals elected in seven seats. The NDP had only two candidates elected, one in Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands, where former national NDP leader Tommy Douglas won again.

The Conservatives won eight seats in 1972, while the Liberals won four in that election. The NDP led all parties in B.C. in 1972 with 11 victories.

Davis
. . . major defeat

Davis fell behind Conservative businessman Ron Huntington early in the counting and never picked up ground. The loss didn't come as a complete surprise, with political observers suggesting he was in trouble in the riding.

The Liberals brought in heavy firepower, with Prime Minister Trudeau and wife Margaret both addressing rallies in the affluent constituency. Davis had represented the riding since 1962 and in 1968, won by more than 20,000 votes, the largest plurality rolled up by any candidate in the country.

It was national NDP leader David Lewis who first raised the spectre of the NDP losing seats in B.C. because of the policies of Barrett's government and, no matter what the cause, it was obvious that the NDP was losing many seats.

One indicator was Vancouver East, the lunchpail riding which has never elected anyone except an NDP or CCF member in its history.

There, trade unionst Paddy Neale fell behind early to Liberal Art Lee, who hadn't even planned to run until drafted in desparation by the liberals.

'Strong nation in unsure era'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday that Canada has elected a strong government in an uncertain world.

"Canada has come out of this election strong and confident in its future," the prime minister said.

"I'm very anxious to get on with the job."

The prime minister praised the election efforts of the three main opposition parties and expressed regret that David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, will not be in the new Parliament.

"Mr. Stanfield had a difficult task," he said referring to the Progressive Conservative leader's policy on income and price controls.

"He was putting a difficult proposition before the Canadian people and I admire his courage in having sustained that fight during two long months."

He said he was sorry so many good people had lost.

Referring to the poor Liberal showing in the western provinces the prime minister said that he renews his pledge that federal policies will be applied fairly in the West.

Tory leadership 'not yet an issue'

HALIFAX (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Monday he does not want to talk at present about whether he will stay on as leader of the Progressive Conservative party.

Stanfield looked glum and spoke in hushed tones to reporters at his campaign headquarters here after hearing the Liberal party was on its way to forming a majority government.

"I will have to talk with officials of the caucus and leaders of the party," he said when asked if he would stay on as leader.

But that's politics, says morose Lewis

UPI, CP

TORONTO — New Democratic party leader David Lewis, whose party held the balance of power in the last parliament, went down to defeat in his home riding Monday at the hands of a political unknown.

Lewis could either resign, stay on as non-parliamentary leader or run for a seat vacated by another NDP member.

"I'm naturally disappointed . . . but that's what politics is about," he told reporters and supporters after it was clear he had been beaten.

Asked by reporters if he would take another member's seat, Lewis replied, "I will obviously have to consider it." As far as the party leadership was concerned, he said, "My own inclination is to say let someone else take it."

Lewis, who has worked for democratic socialism in and out of parliament for 40 years, was defeated in the Toronto riding of York South by Liberal Ursula Appolloni. She is a political newcomer who was not given much of a chance against the NDP leader, but was declared winner 50 minutes after the polls had closed.

Rejected by boss, Moncton man wins

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI) — Controversial Moncton Mayor Leonard Jones, who was rejected as a candidate by the Progressive Conservative party due to his anti-bilingualism stand, was elected to parliament Monday as an independent candidate.

Jones, who originally won the Conservative nomination in the riding of Moncton, was dumped as the party candidate by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

As mayor of Moncton, Jones had taken a strong stand against bilingualism, a move which won considerable support from anglophones in the area.

Jones campaigned as an independent, but sported buttons calling himself a "PC"—People's Candidate.

He's got a visa, nowhere to go

MOSCOW (UPI) — Dean Cornelius Hoxsey has in his breast pocket something which thousands of Soviet Jews would dearly love to have — a valid exit visa.

But Hoxsey, 48, an American until he came here in 1957 and took out Soviet citizenship, has nowhere to go.

He said Saturday the U.S. Embassy has turned down his application to return home either permanently or temporarily.

Having lost his citizenship, he had to apply to go back as an alien. Past membership in the U.S. Communist party would make it difficult to get an immigrant visa.

He cannot go as a visitor because he already had stated his intention to go to the United States permanently.

He said American consular officials are still checking to see whether he has definitely lost his nationality. But his exit visa is valid only until July 16.

Hoxsey was in the news May 15 when Soviet police tried to stop him from entering the American embassy. After an argument, consular officials got him into the embassy.

Hoxsey said he has sent a telegram to his mother in Napa City, Calif., asking her to appeal the American decision.

Hoxsey's mother, Mrs. Leon Hugo, 70, said "we certainly would welcome him back."

"I am a man without a country," Hoxsey said. "I don't know what to do."

His original intention, he said, was to return to the United States and then send for his Russian wife and their 16-year-old adopted daughter.

Hoxsey trained as a doctor since coming here and has been living and working in Volgograd, the former Stalingrad.

Supersonic jets 'much too loud'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supersonic airliners will produce noise that carries farther than even the loudest conventional jets now in use, a United States transportation department report concludes.

The report says the noise probably will not sound much louder than that produced by conventional jets but will probably cover a greater distance.

"Substantial adverse public reaction is expected," the report warns, if the federal government allows such planes as the Concorde or the Soviet TU-144 to begin scheduled flights at almost all United States airports.

The report says a Concorde landing at John Kennedy International Airport at New York would expose 55,000 persons to noise about the same a person would get standing 50 feet from a highway as a heavy-duty diesl truck went past.

The study also says there is "no known or predicted technical means to reduce significantly the noise of the Concorde . . ."

Dangerous trek through jungle will trace river

LONDON (AP) — An international expedition led by one of Britain's toughest jungle adventurers heads down the Congo River in Africa Oct. 1 on what is considered one of the most dangerous treks in modern history.

It will be the first full-scale attempt to navigate the length of the mysterious, half-charted river — 2,718 miles of treacherous rapids, thick jungle, swamps, crocodiles, deadly snakes and black swarms of disease-carrying mosquitos.

The expedition will be commanded by Maj. John Blashford-Snell, a chunky 37-year-old British army officer who between combat tours in Northern Ireland, Cyprus and Oman has led 12 major expeditions in the world's most formidable regions in the last 14 years.

The last was the 13,000-mile trans-American expedition from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego at the tip of South America in 1971.

With him down the Congo will go 131 men and eight women, all specialists in their own fields.

The expedition's primary aim is scientific research, particularly investigating river blindness, an affliction transmitted by flies. It affects four out of every five persons living in northern Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo.

The scientists on the expedition plan, among other things, to catalogue plants and insect and river life.

Another aim is to trace species of gorillas and chimpanzees in southern Zaire, near the Congo's source, which are believed to be unique.

Did black hole find a mate?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Astronomers who claimed a year ago to have discovered a mysterious black hole in space say they may have found a second one, further evidence that such things exist.

In theory, a black hole is the final stage of a dying star several times larger than the sun. As the star collapses into itself, becoming smaller and smaller, its mass compacts and its gravity becomes so strong that surrounding matter is pulled into it.

Since the gravity is so strong that not even light can escape, the dying star appears to be a black area in a field of stars, hence the name "blackhole."

Using data from an astronomy satellite scientists of the Centre for Astrophysics here say they have detected radiation from a star they call Cincinus X-1 with characteristics similar to the suspected black hole they discovered last year.

These objects are fascinating to scientists because theory says the normal rules of time and space do not apply within the conditions of a black hole.

Prof. Richard Giaconni of Harvard University, leader of the team claiming the discoveries, says the existence of a second black hole is important in arguing the objects exist.

To be a black hole, an object must have a measurable mass. The mass can be determined by measuring the effects of its gravity on the motion of an other body, preverably a visible one.

This was the case of the first suspected black hole, Cygnus X-1, which rotates around a visible star.

It burped four times

Star is born underground

DALLAS (UPI) — A group of U.S. and Italian scientists may have detected with apparatus deep in a South Dakota gold mine the birth of a neutron star near the centre of our galaxy last Jan. 4.

The scientists believe they observed four bursts — or "burps" — of antineutrinos. If the scientists are right, they were the first ever recorded.

Each lasted about one millionth of a second and there was a little less than one-thousandth of a second between bursts.

Dr. Ervin Fenyves of the University of Texas at Dallas, scientists from the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Torino, Italy, are involved in the project, which uses a 4,850-foot shaft of the homestake gold mine near Lead, S.D.

On Jan. 4, six counters recorded 24 pulses attributed to antineutrinos. They came in four bursts, each one about a millionth of a second "wide," Fenyves said.

Once each week, a Homestake mining engineer removes recording tape from the apparatus and mails it to Dr. Kenneth Lande at the University of Pennsylvania.

The scientists' paper, Observation of a Possible Antineutrino Pulse of Extra-terrestrial Origin, has been accepted by Nature Magazine to be published this month in Physics Today, the American Institute of Physics Journal.

A neutron star may be formed by the gravitational collapse of a star of intermediate density, or in a supernova explosion. Neutron stars may be the source of "pulsar" radiation, the ticking from far-away objects first observed in 1968 by radio astronomers.

Fenyves said that if a neutron star forms in a supernova explosion, it should oscillate or "bounce" a few times. The time of the bounces should be about one-thousandth of a second. While a neutron star oscillates, it should emit large amounts of antineutrinos.

The basic neutrino, Fenyves said, has no mass and no electrical charge. Therefore it does not interact with other sub-atomic particles and can go through the earth or the collapsing matter of a neutron star, prior to total collapse.

Total collapse results in a "black hole" state from which nothing escapes and in which the neutron star may achieve an unbelievable density — a teaspoonful weighing 200 tons. Antineutrinos would be part of any antimatter created in this transition.

Antimatter particles are like particles of matter except for a few key differences. One is that if antimatter particles are charged, their charges are the reverse of ordinary matter. On earth, antimatter is destroyed in a part of a second, when it contacts matter of normal charge.

Tanaka suffers vote setback

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's Liberal Democratic party appeared Monday to have retained control of the upper house of parliament but with a reduced majority. Political experts described Sunday's elections as a setback for Tanaka, whose popularity was already at a low point, largely because inflation is running at more than 20 per cent a year.

Airplane missing with four aboard

Canadian Press

A search was under way Monday in the southern British Columbia interior for a light plane with four persons aboard missing on a 250-mile flight from Grand Forks to Vancouver.

A search and rescue spokesman here said Monday night that the twin-engine Piper Aztec, piloted by Victor Engstrom, 18, of Prince George, was rented from Columbia Aviation in Prince George last Wednesday. The spokesman said the plane was flown to Spokane, Wash., that day but the party was unable to obtain accommodation because of crowds visiting Expo '74. The plane then flew to Grand Forks where it remained overnight.

The search and rescue spokesman said the Grand Forks airport has no record of the plane taking off Thursday, but the plane was last seen on the ground there that day.

Also on board the plane were the pilot's 19-year-old sister, his 14-year-old brother and a 20-year-old unidentified man. No names of the passengers were available.

Mental halfway house set

COURTENAY — A Fifth Street building to be used as a halfway house for patients recovering from mental illness has been approved by city council.

There will be room for 10 persons, including staff.

The Upper Island Mental Health Society will purchase and operate the house.

The hostel will serve patients who are well enough to Comox but are not ready to be discharged.

Glorious past no guarantee for bright political future

Former cabinet ministers trying for a come-back went down to defeat in Monday's election; newspaper and television men, never having been short of exposure, were clobbered.

Being the grandson of a former prime minister wasn't any help and having been premier of Manitoba wasn't considered a qualification to become an MP by the voters.

Among the prominents who went down to defeat Monday was Michael Meighen, president of the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada and grandson of former Prime Minister Arthur Meighen.

Meighen was defeated by C. M. (Bud) Drury, president of the treasury board, who took the Montreal-Westmount riding for the sixth straight time.

Duff Roblin, former Conservative Premier of Manitoba, couldn't overcome his carpet-bagger stigma and was beaten by the incumbent Liberal Hugh Faulkner, secretary of state, who was re-elected in Peterborough, Ont.

Ron Brewer, a former Canadian Football League player, ran for the Conservatives in Hamilton East and was defeated by Labor Minister John Munro.

It appears that the scandal which followed Munro's admission last week that political patronage was a fact of life didn't hurt his chances for re-election.

It was a bad night for members of the Fourth Estate in the east.

Conservative incumbent Peter Reilly was defeated in Ottawa West by Liberal Lloyd Francis, the MP Reilly defeated in 1972. Reilly became somewhat of a national celebrity years ago for his participation in the CBC public affairs program This Hour Has Seven Days.

Ron Collister, former CBC parliamentary reporter, was defeated in the Toronto riding of York-Scarborough. Collister, who ran for the Conservatives, was beaten by Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury.

Lincoln Alexander, Conservative manpower and immigration critic, was re-elected in Hamilton East. Alexander is the only Negro in the House of Commons.

In Winnipeg North Centre, veteran MP Stanley Knowles, 66, long-time house whip for the NDP and expert on parliamentary procedure, was re-elected. He has held the seat since 1945 with the exception of four years.

Martin O'Connell, a former federal labor minister was re-elected in Toronto Scarborough East after being defeated in 1972 by a Conservative.

Simma Holt, Vancouver Sun columnist, was elected for the liberals in Vancouver Kingsway in her first bid for political office.

Rev. Andy Hogan was elected in Cape Breton-East Richmond to become the first Roman Catholic priest ever elected to the House of Commons and the first third-party candidate elected to the Commons from the Atlantic provinces since 1962.

Leonard Jones, a former mayor, was elected as an independent in Moncton after being rejected as a candidate by the Progressive Conservative party, defeating four other candidates.

Allan MacEachen, Privy Council president, and Liberal House leader, was re-elected in Cape Breton Highlands-Canso.

John Lundrigan, the PC member for Gander-Twillingate in the last house, was defeated in Bonavista-Trinity-Conception by Liberal David Rooney.

Ontario swung key votes in Grit sweep

By DOUG SMALL

TORONTO (CP) — Most of what Ontario took from Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals in the election of 1972, it returned Monday, setting up a return to majority government.

Liberals easily captured the bulk of the province's 88 seats in the general election, as they did in 1968, and once again cut into what was traditional Progressive Conservative support.

Voters returned all 10 of Trudeau's cabinet ministers from Ontario.

Party strategists had agreed before the election that the province would be the key to the election, and all major parties predicted gains.

He was beaten by Liberal Ursula Appolloni, a former broadcaster.

Ontario Premier William Davis, a Conservative, said:

"I'm very disappointed. I think Mr. Stanfield did all any person could do to suggest solutions to the present problems."

Tories sweep Alberta

Prairies tell Grits no

EDMONTON (CP) — While much of Canada gave a resounding "yes" to Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals in Monday's federal general election, the Prairies, as usual, said "no."

The Conservatives swept Alberta, just as they did in 1972, grabbing all 19 seats without much trouble.

They captured nine of Manitoba's 13 seats, a gain of one from the last election. The Liberals maintained their two seats while the New Democratic Party's representation dropped to two from three.

In Saskatchewan, the Conservatives won eight seats, one more than in 1972, while the NDP dropped to two from five.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker had no trouble winning re-election in Prince Albert. It was the 12th time Saskatchewan voters have sent him to the commons.

There were fewer than a handful of changes from 1972 in seats across the Prairies and none of these came as any great surprise.

In the Manitoba riding of Selkirk, persistent campaigner Dean Whiteway, who lost by 30 votes in 1972, won for the Conservatives against incumbent Doug Rowland of the NDP.

But there was no change in Alberta or the Northwest Territories.

Marcel Lambert, former speaker of the commons, won easy re-election in Edmonton West. Cattleman Bert Hargrave retained Medicine Hat against H. A. (Buck) Olson, former agriculture minister, who lost his seat in 1972.

Oilmen hope Grits will ease tax bill

CALGARY (CP) — Oil industry spokesmen said Monday night they hope the Liberal government will modify proposals which would increase the industry's tax bill by about $410 million annually.

Maurice Paulson, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, summed up the common viewpoint when he said:

"I hope there will be amendments to the May budget proposals. I think they (the Liberals) realize more money has to be spent on exploration."

The minority Liberal government was defeated in May over its budget, which included a provision to remove the federal tax-exempt status the oil industry enjoys on royalties — taxes on production paid to provincial government.

A number of major petroleum companies cut back on exploration at the time, claiming the proposed changes would reduce the profit margin needed to continue exploring for new energy supplies.

Prior to the electon, Finance Minister John Turner said the budget proposals would be reintroduced if the Liberals were re-elected, as they were Monday.

John Poyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said he thinks it is in Canada's best interests to have a majority government.

"I am concerned with the treatment of the oil industry by the Liberal government, whose May budget had very damaging consequences," said Poyen. "I hope some of the budget proposals will be revamped and certain changes will be made to allow oil companies to make a fair level of profit."

Arne Neilsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., said he thinks some of the differences between the industry and Ottawa "will be ironed out" now that a majoritty government has been elected.

What, who, me?

Hare wins race

HALIFAX (UPI) — In the end, the hare won in the race with the tortoise, and Conservative leader Robert Stanfield became a three-time loser.

In the final days of the campaign, Conservative strategists had compared it to the nursery tale race between the hare and the tortoise, with Stanfield in the role of the slow-starting but strong-finishing tortoise.

But with his party's failure to unseat the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau, the 60-year-old Stanfield not only lost his bid to govern the land, he probably also lost his party.

Conservatives said they knew the game was lost when Ontario turned against the Tories and backed the Liberals.

Stanfield felt part of the Ontario losses might have stemmed from voters wanting a majority government. "Perhaps they felt that with their strong base in Quebec, the Liberals had the best chance of forming a majority."

Another factor in the Ontario losses, he felt, was the tough campaign waged by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan in southern Ontario.

He also credited Trudeau for a vigorous personal campaign in the country generally.

He said he did not believe his party's defeat could be interpreted as a rejection of the wage and price controls he had single-mindedly advocated throughout the campaign.

Twelve successive wins

John D's record

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker reserved judgment Monday night on the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party in the wake of the defeat suffered by the party at the hands of the Liberals in the general election.

Diefenbaker, who had little trouble posting his 12th consecutive victory for the Conservatives in a federal election, declined to comment on the possible effect of the election on Robert Stanfield's leadership of the party. "It's too early to talk about those things."

The election of Diefenbaker in Prince Albert was never in doubt. He piled up a commanding early lead and finished the night with 5,200 more votes than the combined total of his three opponents.

While expressing disappointment at the national result, Diefenbaker said his win "represents the first time in Canadian history that someone has won 12 successive general elections." The 78-year-old Diefenbaker said the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier had 11 consecutive victories during his reign as prime minister.

"I'm disappointed at the national result, but after all, the people have spoken and I accept the verdict," said Diefenbaker.

"I do feel that the people of the prairie provinces took their stand, and strongly, against the Trudeau government because too often in the last few years the west has been forgotten."

Diefenbaker said he was "very sorry" to hear of the personal defeat of NDP leader David Lewis. "I always had for him that respect which I give to political opponents who I regard as sincere."

Davis loses to Tory

Less than two hours after the polls closed in B.C., the minister conceded defeat to Huntington, 53, who lost to Davis in the 1972 general federal election by 6,616 voter.

The North Vancouver businessman campaigned hard to topple the 58-year-old cabinet minister, who won his seat in 1968 by 21,000 votes — the highest majority of any candidate in Canada.

"I'm going to continue in politics," Davis said in an interview shortly after conceding defeat.

"I'm not quite sure what I'm going to be doing in the next month or two, but in the long run I'll be involved in political life."

Asked when he would run again for the Liberal party, Davis replied: "When I get a chance."

He attributed his personal defeat, in part, to a feeling the Liberal government had ignored B.C.

Davis said he thought government spending was another factor adding to his defeat in the high-income riding.

This was only the third July election in Canada's history, and voting was carried out under generally warm, sunny skies. It appeared the number of voters who turned out would be well below the 1972 record of 9,667,489.

Sharp
'stupid campaign'

The counting was barely over when the politicians began finding reasons for the results.

One of the most pointed comments came from External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, who said "the Conservatives ran a stupid campaign." He said that by concentrating on inflation, Stanfield neglected other issues.

Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said the Conservatives made a mistake by inviting former prime minister John Diefenbaker back on the campaign trail.

"He said such stupidities that no one could believe him."

Anyway, none of the politicians had to wait long into the vote-counting to see that a Liberal victory was on the way.

Resoundingly defeated were more than 100 Communist candidates as well as members of such splinter groups as the Rhinoceros Party, a group of independents spoofing politics in general, the Garden Party, which wanted to legalize marijuana on Prince Edward Island, and the Waffle Party, which wanted to flatten the Rockies as an environment project.

The results shocked pollsters who predicted Trudeau would not run much better than he did in 1972 when his Liberals captured 109 seats in Canada's closest election ever.

Pollsters predicted before the election it would most likely end with neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives winning an absolute majority in the house of commons—133 seats.

Stock shock

Dow dives 21.20 to 770.57

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered Monday its second-biggest loss so far this year, with the Dow Jones industrial average plunging 21.20 to a 3½-year low of 770.57.

The Dow, a widely-followed indicator that includes 30 blue chip stocks, took its biggest loss since Feb. 4, when it gave up 22.44 points.

Rising interest rates and steadily mounting business-loan demand in the United States have caused trouble on the stock market for months, and were blamed again for Monday's sell-off.

Douglas, the former NDP leader, was one who reversed the anti-NDP trend, winning easily in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

Another disaster for the NDP came in Surrey-White Rock, where the NDP's Barry Mather had been the MP since 1962.

Mather didn't seek re-election and the conservatives moved in behind teacher and evangelist Benno Friesen, who won an easy victory.

Most of their victories were easy ones.

The Liberals were pulling off some surprises of their own, with journalist Simma Holt winning in the traditional NDP riding of Vancouver Kingsway and Iona Campagnola beating veteran NDP member Frank Howard in the Northern Skeena Riding.

Howard had dismissed suggestions that provincial NDP policies would hurt his chances, but was obviously hurt by provincial policies, especially the controversial mining act.

The shocking news was the smashing of the NDP, which fell to its lowest B.C. representation since 1940, when the CCF, forerunner of the NDP, won only one of B.C.'s 16 seats.

The only other NDP candidate to win a victory was Stuart Leggatt, who won a close battle in New Westminster, the riding he took from the Liberals in 1972.

Some of the NDP losses were almost unbelievable. Among those crashing to defeat were Ran Harding, the party's environment critic, who was defeated by Conservative Bob Brisco in Kootenay West, which hadn't swung from the NDP or the CCF since 1945.

Israeli commandos strike at 3 ports

Israeli commandos blew up a number of small vessels in three Lebanese harbors Monday night in a hit-and-run attack that the Israeli command called a warning against a planned Arab guerrilla sea attack against Israel.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said troops going ashore from naval gunboats sank about 30 boats — "about 10 boats in each harbor" — at Tyre, Ras-e-Shak and Sidon, three of the biggest Lebanese ports. Sidon is 30 miles north of the Israeli frontier.

But a Lebanese military communique reported the sinking of only 11 fishing boats and said one person was wounded when a delayed explosive charge exploded in Sidon harbor.

The Tel Aviv command said it knew nothing of gunboats shelling two Lebanese ports or helicopters patrolling while the raid was in progress, as reported from Beirut.

The Palestinian news agency WAFA said four small fishing harbors came under attack by six to seven Israeli gunboats and torpedo boats. WAFA said the Israeli attack began at 10:45 p.m. with the shelling of Tyre harbor and "at the same time a number of enemy troops infiltrated the region from a naval vessel and placed explosive charges under the wood dock."

The agency said the Israeli forces were engaged by local citizens and Lebanese army troops.

Israeli military sources said naval gunboats took the commandos to the harbors where they blew up 10 motorboats in each with planted explosives. One source said there were no Lebanese or guerrilla casualties. The military command said Israel suffered no casualties.

"It was a lightning operation," a military source said. "It was more of a warning than anything because we saw that preparations were underway for an assault."

It was the first naval operation against the Lebanese coast since May 10 when gunboats struck what Israel described as a guerrilla base at Rashadiyeh.

"It was just a warning that the sea route to Israel also is not open," a source said. "If they think the sea route is open, we showed them that it isn't and that they had better beware."

Defence Minister Shimon Peres said after the June 24 guerrilla assault against the northern Israel town of Nahariyya that saw four Israelis and three Arabs slain that Israeli forces virtually shut the land route into Israel by tightening security at the Lebanese frontier.

Military sources have said Israel has built new fencing, erected more barbed wire and installed electronic sensors to halt guerrilla infiltration.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said last month that Israel would not be limited to individual retaliatory actions for specific Arab guerrilla attacks.

"The war that we are going to conduct is to be a continuous one, rather than in reaction to an action," Rabin said.

Navy to scrap 291 vessels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Navy is scrapping nearly 291 old carriers, cruisers and other ships in the first major reduction of its "mothball fleet" since the Second World War. The navy described them as either worn-out or outdated.

Their scrapping will leave 536 ships and smaller craft in the reserve fleet. The navy said it expects to net about $20 million, which will buy about one-third of a new patrol frigate.

Appearing at his riding headquarters with his wife Sophie by his side, Lewis said, "Maybe I don't have to worry about retirement now. The electorate of South York may have retired me."

But, he added, "I have not stopped working for democratic socialism. As long as there is breath in me, I will continue to work for it."

Your good health

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother reads your column every day. I hope you can help her.

She is 45 and had major surgery and they found she has diabetes. They put her on two kinds of insulin, regular and U-80 N.P.H.

Now she thinks she can eat anything because she takes insulin. She has gained 20 pounds, eats pie, cake, candy. She drinks an average of 12 bottles of unsweetened pop a day, one quart of milk, one quart of grapefruit juice plus two gallons of water.

She can't see half the time, she has itching in the genital region. What will happen to her if she continues this way?

She won't go to the doctor for her checkup because she has gained so much weight.

Please explain her future as she reads your articles every day. We love her and want her to live. — Mrs. A. F. P.

Explain her future? What future? The way she's behaving, she hasn't much future, and what there is will be laden with misery.

She's an extreme example of the type of person who won't admit the facts of diabetes. Why this applies particularly to diabetes, I don't know.

Taking insulin doesn't mean she can eat all she wants. It is absolutely vital that she consume no sugar as in confections, and keep her calorie intake down. The insulin can counterbalance only so much sugar.

Ears peeled for poisonous toads

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — Five escaped sugar cane toads will have a special request played for them this week over radio stations in this tropical North Australian town.

The "request" will be a sample of the toads' mating call, taped by a university professor in the hope that the five toads, all dangerous to animals, will be caught once people recognize the toads' distinctive night-time sound.

The professor and officials of the northern territory wildlife department will tour the suburbs of this town of 50,000 persons playing the call from tape recorders in an effort to lure the toads into the open.

What began as a chuckle three weeks ago has become a serious matter.

Additionally, the eight-inch-long toads pack a poison, squirted from shoulder humps, which can kill dogs, cats and pigs.

Prof. Michael Tyler, who will fly 1,700 miles here from Adelaide to help the hunters, said Monday the toads may pose a major threat to farmers and may become a nuisance to householders.

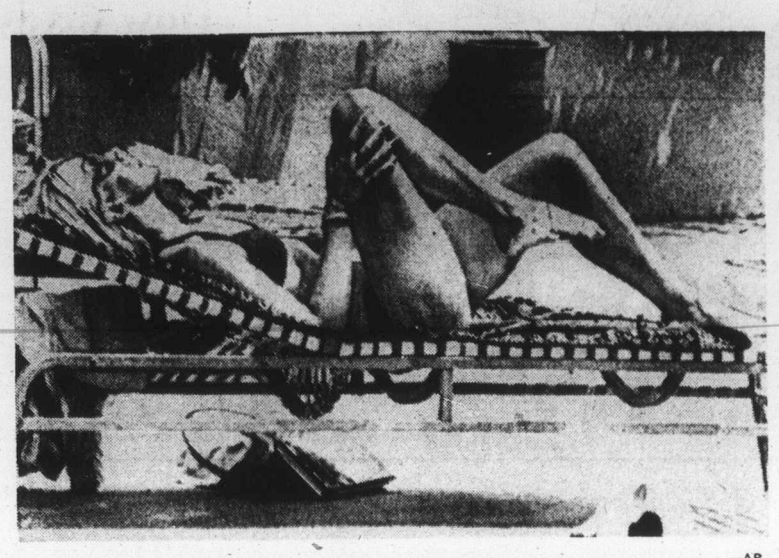

He said in one year, a male and female toad can produce 20,000 toads.

Originally, 18 toads were brought to Darwin from Queensland by a biology teacher who wanted to use them in school lessons.

They escaped from his home and the hunt has been on since.

Wildlife department officers and school children managed to account for all but five.

Tyler said the toads — the sex of missing five is not known — have been free long enough to start breeding. Apart from producing 20,000 eggs annually the toads have a lifespan of up to 40 years.

Picture it: a ballot of 73 names

By BILL COULTHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — So you think it's a bother having to go to the polls again only 20 months after the last federal election?

How would you like to be faced with a ballot of 73 names and required to mark it showing your preference for the candidates in order from one to 73?

That was the task facing voters in New South Wales, Australia, when they cast ballots to choose their state's members of the Australian senate last May.

And, said F. L. Ley, chief Australian electoral officer, anyone who shirked his civic responsibilities by not voting was subject to a $10 fine.

Ley said Australia is looking for ways to simplify the voting for senators, which is unwieldly not only for voters but for electoral officers who have to count ballots.

While it takes a Canadian voter only moments to mark the single "X" that shows his choice for a member to represent him in Parliament, an Australian voter takes an average of 6.8 minutes to list in order of preference his choices for senators. Australians also vote at the same time for their member of the House of Representatives.

When the votes are in, it then takes authorities a month or more to determine who, in fact, was elected to the senate. Results for the representatives are largely available about as quickly as they are in Canada however.

"I think it's safe to say" that Australia will adopt a new system under which voters will not have to mark their preference for all senate candidates, Ley said.

Permanent voters' list

Australia has a permanent voters' list — with voters again subject to a $10 fine if they do not keep their names up to date if they move. It enables that country to permit absentee voting.

This also slows the results, as overseas votes are not counted until 12 days after the election.

But it speeds the preparation for an election to about one month, compared with about two months in Canada.

"We can be ready for an election on very short notice," Ley said.

Puerto Rico recently has adopted Canada's system of house-to-house enumeration of electors but has not yet tried it out in an election.

Aponte said he is here to see how it works, study the procedures, and find out "which of them fits into the Puerto Rican reality."

He also expressed interest in Canada's system of advance polls for voters who cannot be in their riding on election day.

Morton was in Ottawa as part of a study of electoral procedures which is taking him to most provinces and to a number of other countries throughout the democratic world.

He has the task of coming up with a draft for a new B.C. elections act in time for the B.C. legislature's spring session next year.

Officials trim pay to battle inflation

LOGANSPORT, Ind. — Members of the Cass County board of commissioners have voted a pay cut for themselves.

They asked all elected officials of the county to help fight inflation by soliciting no salary increases for 1975.

"Inflation is the No. 1 problem in the country today," said Bernard Rose, a farmer who heads the board as president. "I don't think we can ask other county officials to battle inflation unless we set an example ourselves."

The example the three commissioners set was to eliminate a transportation item from the budget being prepared for next year. State law authorizes commissioners to receive mileage for travel to board meetings and around the area on county business.

Michael, now a 23-year-old college student, volunteered to pick up the ring at Gieg's home. Carved inside the ring is the date of Mrs. Keene's wedding — Friday, the 13th.

Nixon 'not so bad'

MANILA (UPI) — Karen Morrison, the American entry in the 1974 Miss Universe beauty pageant, said on the weekend she feels President Nixon is "not so bad" and that Americans still don't know enough about Watergate.

The five-foot-11-inch beauty, a threatre arts student from Saint Charles, Ill., and 58 other Miss Universe contestants were formally introduced to Filipino newsmen at a news conference.

Asked what she thinks of Nixon, the 19-year-old Miss Morrison said "he's not so bad."

On Nixon's recent trip to the Soviet Union and the Middle East, Miss Morrison said, "I really haven't got a chance to read that much about it because I've been travelling. I think it's very, very important, from what I have read."

Miss Morrison, who has a 36-25-36 figure, also was asked her views on Watergate.

"I think people don't know that much about it," she said. "I think there's a lot more to be found out as far as that goes."

Canadian Press

A tentative contract agreement for workers at Ottawa's two English-language daily newspapers, the Citizen and the Journal, was ratified Sunday at a joint meeting of four employee unions.

The proposed wage-and-benefit package "is the best settlement negotiated in Canada without a strike," said Allan Heritage, spokesman for the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, the bargaining agent for the unions.

The contract now would be sent to individual unions for ratification or rejection. A decision is expected within about two weeks, said Heritage.

The proposed settlement, reached early Saturday morning, would end seven months of negotiations in a contract dispute which caused work slow-downs and cancellation of publication on three occasions.

The contract would give district managers and five-year Citizen reporters weekly salaries of $301 in a 30-month contract, an $83 increase from the present $218.10 a week. Journal reporters are not organized.

Journeyman compositors, printers and circulation truck-drivers would reach the $301 level over a 32-month contract.

Meanwhile, in B.C., the Prince George Citizen did not publish Monday because of a labor dispute with its printers. It was the first time the newspaper, with a circulation of 18,000, failed to appear since it became a daily in 1957.

A company spokesman said the printers, members of the International Typographical Union, Local 868, came to work at the usual time of 7:30 a.m., but walked out for a study session around 10 a.m.

The session was expected to last until around 4 p.m., when the printers planned to leave early to vote in the federal election.

Although the company last week served 72-hour lockout notice on the printers, it has not yet been executed.

Returning officers

Illness delays voting start in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Illness caused minor delay Monday in the opening of federal election polls in Vancouver Kingsway.

Returning officer Arthur Walker said 10 of the 186 district returning officers in his riding called in ill and several polls opened late.

"They weren't that late," said Walker.

He said he had experienced great difficulty in finding sufficient staff for his riding.

"I've been trying to get personnel for the last week but you can't make people work for you," he said.

In Burnaby-Seymour, returning officer Doris Morrison reported three polling clerks and one district returning officer had called in sick. There was no delay in opening the polls.

She reported a heavy voter turnout, as did the Victoria returning officer.

Delays in pollling station openings were also reported in Capilano.

One voter due to cast her ballot at Canyon Heights elementary school said she had to leave without voting because of the late opening of the station.

She said several others were waiting to vote when she left at 9:10 a.m., 10 minutes after the polls were scheduled to open.

No peeking, now

Margaret Trudeau peeks from behind polling booth in Ottawa, checking to make sure newsmen don't get a peek at her choice on ballot. She and prime minister both voted in Ottawa before visiting Trudeau's home riding of Mount Royal.

It's enough to drive you . . .

HALIFAX (CP) — Officials at Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's campaign headquarters were perplexed when a woman called to apply for a nursing job and another sought advice on nerve pill dosages.

It wasn't a prank by the opposition, the officials discovered, but the fact that the telephone listing once belonged to the Halifax Mental Hospital which ceased operation several years ago.

Liberals gain in Quebec

The grip tightens

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals strengthened their traditional stranglehold on Quebec province in Monday's election, eating into Social Credit support and dashing hopes for Progressive Conservative advances.

Conservative foreign affairs critic Claude Wagner was re-elected in St. Hyacinthe and Roch La Salle, who rejoined the Conservatives after sitting as an Independent in the last House, retained Joliette riding.

The Liberals appeared destined to hold at least the 56 seats they won in the 1972 election and perhaps add one or two to that total.

Marcel Masse, Conservative hopeful in Labelle riding, lost to Liberal Maurice Dupras, while in Montreal St. Henri, broadcaster Frenchie Jarraud was defeated by his Liberal opponent, Gerard Loiselle.

Caouette's son, Gilles, lost his Charlevoix seat to Liberal Charles Lapointe. The younger Caouette had been touted as an eventual successor to his father.

Rene Matte, another possible future Socred leadership contender, was re-elected in Champlain riding, but party candidates in several traditionally Socred ridings were trailing their Liberal opponents.

Among Liberal cabinet members re-elected was Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, who defeated Michael Meighen, PC national president and grandson of former prime minister Arthur Meighen, in Montreal Westmount.

The New Democrats, counting in this election on union support and votes from Parti Quebecois supporters despite a PQ order to spoil ballots, held on to their record of never having elected a member of Parliament in Quebec.

Mrs. Stanfield 'disappointed'

HALIFAX (CP) — Mary Stanfield told reporters Monday night she was deeply disappointed at the results of Monday's general election.

Interviewed at Stanfield headquarters, the wife of the Progressive Conservative ltader saidher husband felt he had done all he could to win the election.

Her husband was sorry for the many Conservative workers inhe campaign, especially those who helped him to get re-elected in his own Halifax riding, she said.

The loss of Conservative seats in Nova Scotia probably was the result of the recent provincial election won by the Liberals, she added.

Mrs. Stanfield said she and herhusband had not talked about the future during the election night.

Tories badly hurt in Atlantic region

HALIFAX (CP) — Liberals, a lone New Democrat and an independent made inroads into traditional Progressive Conservative ridings in the Atlantic provinces.

The Progressive Conservatives dropped five of 22 seats they held in the four provinces after the 1972 federal election — three to the Liberals, one to the NDP and one to an Independent.

A startling PC loss came in Newfoundland where flamboyant John Lundrigan was defeated by David Rooney in Bonavista - Trinity - Conception after leaving Gander-Twillingate, the riding he represented in the last Parliament. Gander-Twillingate also went Liberal.

In Nova Scotia, Liberal Coline Campbell defeated PC incumbent Charles Haliburton in South Western Nova and Rev. Andy Hogan, a New Democrat, took Cape Breton-East Richmond from the Conservatives.

Privy Council President Allan MacEachen retained his Cape Breton Highlands-Canso seat.

Liberal Michael Landers defeated incumbent Conservative Tom Bell in Saint John-Lancaster and, not surprisingly, fourmer Moncton, N.B., mayor Leonard Jones, running as an independent after being rejected by the PCs over his bilingualism stand, took the Conservative seat.

Robert Muir in Cape Breton-The Sydneys, and R. G. L. Fairweather in Funday-Royal, both veteran Conservative members, retained their seats after strong challenges from Liberals.

Over-all Conservative strength dropped to 17 seats from 22 in the 1972 election in the Atlantic provinces with the Liberals going to 13 seats from 10, the NDP picking up their first seat in the region since 1962 and one Independent being added to the slate.

It was the strongest Liberal showing since the 1965 federal election when they won 15 seats to 18 for the PCs. One federal constituency was dropped after that election.

In Nova Scotia, Liberal Premier Gerald Regan, fresh from an election victory in April, campaigned hard for federal candidates because of his conviction that wages and prices controls would hurt the province's economy.

Liberal Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island, whose government also won re-election this spring also strongly denounced controls.

Restaurant head:

Voting drink ban hard on tourism

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Canadian Restaurant Association says prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages on election day is a ludicrous idea that discourages tourism.

"It really makes no sense," Brian Cooper said in an interview.

"Many federal and provincial governments are spending millions of dollars to bring tourists to Canada yet these outmoded regulations prevent them from having a good time."

Under the Canada Elections Act, bars cannot serve alcoholic beverages until polls close at 8 p.m. local times.

Cooper said the Calgary Stampede parade was dry because of the laws.

David Wark, food and beverage manager of a hotel near Toronto International Airport, also opposed the regulations.

"People aren't going to change their vote because they've had a drink in a bar."

He said he expected to lose about $1,000 in revenue Monday because of the law.

Polling station grave, literally

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — For more than 300 voters in Prince Edward-Hastings riding Monday's election meant going to the graveyard.

Year-long wait to be told 'no'

CAPE ST. GEORGE, Nfld. (CP) — This community on the Port au Port Peninsula in western Newfoundland has been waiting for a year for the arrival of a resident doctor. Their wait is over. He isn't coming. The provincial health department says the doctor changed his mind.

Chairs covered

LONDON (CP) — Protests from women civil servants have prompted the issuing of nylon covers for government office chairs. The women had complained they were running up large bills to replace tights torn on the rough edges of chairs. There are nearly 800,000 chairs to be covered.

Blakeney will pass leadership

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney said Monday night he has no intention of seeking the federal NDP leadership.

"My job as premier is taxing enough," he said in an interview after hearing of the defeat of federal NDP leader David Lewis.

Describing himself as "a little bit disappointed" in the general election results, Blakeney said people appeared to be voting for a majority government, as opposed to voting on issues.

He predicted a federal-provincial battle if the re-elected Liberal government reintroduces its budget. Blakeney had objected strenuously to the budget's resource tax proposals.

Saskatchewan Liberal leader Dave Steuart said he expects Prime Minister Trudeau to sit down with provincial representatives and work out an acceptable resource-taxation policy.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) — developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Martlet in step with soft line

By BILL LEVER
Colonist Reporter

It happened suddenly, almost simultaneously, on campuses across the continent. The day of the movement — of protests and crusades which not long ago were virtually synonymous with student life — has come to an end.

The University of Victoria was never really a hotbed of anything but even there activism was reflected in the usual things like student demonstrations and in anti-war and ecology crusades; and in its campus newspaper, The Martlet, which for several years patterned itself after the then-flourishing underground press and prided itself on radical chic and four-letter frankness.

Last year's Martlet, symbolizing what some people are calling a return to normalcy, decided to play it straight and get back to the basics of scholastic journalism — covering campus news, with admittedly less flamboyance but a lot more credibility.

This year's paper, according to new editor Creg Middleton, will be even straighter.

Middleton, who put out his first issue this week, says he has a specific theme and goal for The Martlet — professionalism.

"There's not much point in running a student newspaper like some kind of entertainment club," he says. "And it's not just an ego trip for the editor and his clique."

The Martlet's attempt to achieve higher standards has already started paying off — not only for readers who got a better product but also for several graduating staff members who quickly landed jobs on commercial newspapers.

It's a far cry from the radical, sometimes pornographic of a few years ago, whose editor boasted in print that he would never be hiredby the Victoria dailies.

The paper will also have a potentially valuable ally in a journalism course to be taught, for the first time, by a professional journalist.

The instructor, former Colonist reporter Bill Thomas, says writing for The Martlet will be optional, but he expects that any student considering a newspaper career will welcome the opportunity of getting his work in print.

"The newspaper business is a trade," Thomas says, "and you only learn a trade one way — by doing it.

"We won't have any textbooks other than the Canadian Press style book. You can read 500 books on plumbing and still not know how to plumb a house.

"What this course will do is try to teach people how to write clearly and concisely. You can't really teach them, but you can show them and help them."

Having The Martlet will make the course more than an artificial academic exercise, Thomas added.

And, as Middleton says, the course is another forward step for a straight paper that's trying to serve its community and prepare its workers for the real world.

Boy survives 24,000 volts

BARKING, England (CP) — Desmont White, 9, received a 24,000-volt shock and was thrown 24 feet after touching a railway electrical line. But the boy survived with only superficial burns. "It's quite incredible," said a doctor specializing in treatment of burns. Said Desmond: "I'll never go near the railway lines again."

Hong Kong vets ready to meet

The last convention of the Hong Kong Veterans Association of Canada to be held in Western Canada will start at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Ingraham Hotel.

Convention chairman Lionel Speller said Saturday the annual conventions, which started in 1948, will not be held west of Toronto again.

"It's a matter of expenses," Speller said. He added that the association's provincial branches will send delegates from distant points to future conventions but their expenses will be paid.

About 150 Hong Kong veterans are expected at this year's meeting which will be opened by Saanich Mayor Ed Lum.

The veterans belonged to either the Winnipeg Grenadiers or the Royal Rifles of Canada regiments and were captured by the Japanese on Christmas Day, 1941, and kept prisoners for nearly four years.

"There were 1,998 soldiers and two nursing sisters in Hong Kong and between the war and prison camps, 598 died," Speller said. He said more died in prison camps than were killed during 18 days of fighting.

Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes, V.C., will take the salute in front of the Empress when the veterans parade to the Cenotaph to hold a memorial service in front of the legislative buildings at 10 a.m. Saturday.

A business session will be held Friday and see the film Lost in Error the only film made of the battle at Hong Kong.

Business starts rise under NDP

Premier Barrett released statistics Monday which show the number of businesses incorporating in B.C. has been steadily increasing since the NDP came to power in August 1972.

In the first six months of 1972, a total of 4,702 businesses had incorporated under the B.C. Companies Act. In the corresponding time this year, the number of incorporations reached 5,544. Last year, 5,238 businesses incorporated until the end of June.

Businesses in B.C. are prespering under our government, and the increasing number of incorporations shows that the people of our province have confidence in the bright future of this area," the premier said in a prepared statement.

Douglas victory dulls in regret

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — T. C. Douglas was jubilant Monday when he was declared elected in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding.

He described Lewis' defeat in his riding of York South as "a great tragedy for Canada and the New Democratic Party."

The future of Lewis as party leader will be up to Lewis himself and the party's national committee, Douglas said.

He added that the NDP is "not short of bright young leadership candidates."

Douglas was clearly the winner when 262 of the 308 polls in the riding gave him 16,273 votes compared with his nearest rival, Donald Taylor, of Duncan, a Progressive Conservative, who had 14,386. Ray Kane, Liberal, had 8,419, and Ernest Knott, Communist, had 223.

Douglas said the over-all majority gained by the Liberals showed "the people wanted a majority government."

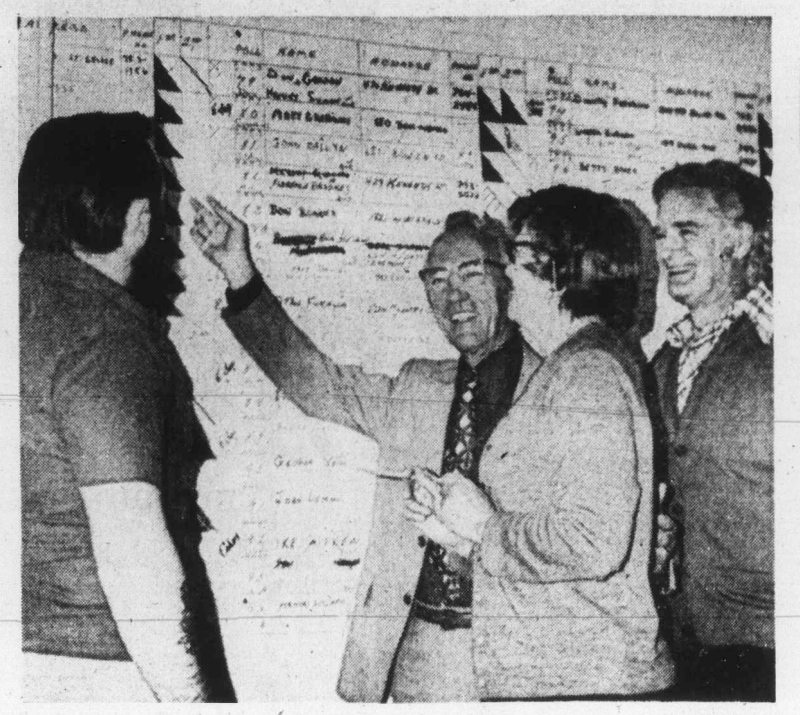

He said everyone had expected the Liberals to win heavily in Quebec but he was surprised they had done so well in Ontario.

He speculated that people voted for the Liberals there because they "knew the Liberals would sweep Quebec and to get a majority they felt they had to vote Liberal."

Douglas, who had earlier said this would be his last effort for public office, said he may now have to revise his plans. He said this would depend on the NDP's situation "at the time."

"I don't want to run again," Douglas said. "In fact, I didn't want to run this time but the election was called too soon to get another candidate ready.

"That decision will now have to be made at a later date."

Tory-Grit squeaker in Comox

PORT ALBERNI — Comox-Alberni riding at one time appeared to be about to repeat history Monday night when, with 123 polls reporting out of 292, only 32 votes separated the leading candidates.

At 10 p.m., Progressive Conservative Alan Lazerte had 4,923 votes and Liberal Hugh Anderson had 4,891.

But at 10:30 p.m., Anderson was leading with 12,020, with Lazerte on his trail with 10,921. Barker with 9,627, and Communist party candidate with 545.

The victor in the upset result in what had been considered fairly safe NDP territory was still undecided at press time. As various polls reported, the lead seesawed between the Liberal and the Tory.

Lazerte, hopeful that he would retain the lead, said he was personally disappointed that the Tories had not won nationally and added: "It appears the people like sugar-coated pills instead of the medicine that would be good for them."

In 1968, the Comox-Alberni riding was won by the Liberals by nine votes but several irregularities in voting resulted in a byelection being called, which the NDP won.

Anderson is a head of an insurance agency in Port Alberni. He is a former RCAF officer and was once stationed in Comox, and later further north in the riding in Holberg.

Born in 1933 in Saskatoon, he attended the universities of Alberta and Manitoba, and graduated with honors majoring in history and political science.

He joined RCAF in 1956 and obtained his wings in 1958. He left the air force in 1962 and joined Allstate Insurance Co. in Edmonton. In 1965 he was transferred to Victoria and, in 1967 to Port Alberni.

Industry wants wages probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia pulp industry wants an industrial inquiry commissioner appointed to investigate the relationship of tradesmen's rates in the forestry and pulp sections of the industry.

Donald Lanskail, Pulp and Paper Industrials Relations bureau president, said Monday the industry has been unable to solve the problem and is seeking government intervention.

The unions, United Paperworkers International Union and Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, are unhappy because the traditional differential between their tradesmen and International Woodworkers of America tradesmen has been eliminated.

Mid-contract talks between the industry and the two unions bargaining jointly have failed to achieve anything. The two-year contract expires next summer.

Pulp union mechanics now earn $6.94 an hour compared with the majority of IWA tradesmen who earn $7.28 an hour. Top-rated IWA tradesmen, however, earn $7.50½ an hour. Pulp unions were seeking this rate.

Graduate chosen as Nanaimo queen

NANAIMO — Carol Mangano, 18, of 10 Gillespie, has been chosen Miss Nanaimo for 1974.

She was chosen from among 14 candidates in the annual pageant on the weekend.

Miss Mangano graduated this year from Nanaimo high school and is now looking for a job as a secretary.

One of her first duties will be to take part in celebrations during the annual bathtub race to Vancouver July 21, and that will be followed by competition, along with girls from all over the province, in the Miss PNE contest in Vancouver in mid-August.

She will represent the city at functions throughout the province.

Beard inspects Salish basket

Qualicum Beach site sought

Collector dreams of museum

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — Qualicum Beach resident Graham Beard has for years had a dream of getting a natural history museum into operation. He is looking for others with a similar interest, as well as space for the museum.

Beard has been collecting since high school days and has an impressive display of fossils, rocks and preserved insects as well as skeletons of birds and animals.

He is also deeply interested in the history of the West Coast Indians and is accumulating samples of their craft.

Beard and his wife Tina are well qualified in their fields. He teaches archeology, biology and photography at Qualicum Beach high school and is one of a group of 20 teachers from across Canada who will attend a special course on Canadian geology at the University of Western Ontario, London, this summer.

The Beards have many collections, hence their interest in acquiring a site for a museum. In addition to preserved insects and butterflies, cabinets and trays in their living room contain many Indian artifacts found during "digs" in excavations made for new buildings.

Rocks form a large part of the Beard collection. Experience and a trained eye help Beard spot rocks which may contain fossils. When he finds a likely one, he carefully splits it to find any impression of a small animal, fish or plant.

But space is a problem. Like the living room, his double garage is fairly bulging with items which range from the toe bone of a dinosaur to skulls of modern animals.

Beard said a display may soon be set up in one of the beach hotels, but he hopes for wider interest among Qualicum residents and eventually a museum where the public may learn more about Vancouver Island's natural history.

Bands will start games

NANAIMO — Caledonia Park will ring with the sound of pipes and drums Saturday when massed pipe bands herald the opening of the 17th annual Upper Island Highland Games.

Caledonia Society president Harry Mowatt says the official opening of the games this year will be handled by the city's centennial king and queen, Cecil Mulholland and Mrs. Flora McGirr. Chieftain of the day will be T. C. Douglas.

Dancing and piping competitions will begin Saturday at 9 a.m. and, along with all the regular trophies and prizes, two special centennial trophies will be up for competition this year. They are contributed by the city of Nanaimo.

Traditional Scottish field events, including tossing the caber, hammer throw and weight and sheaf, along with other track and field events, will be held through the day.

Namu shrimp find promises bonanza

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — Discovery of a vast new shrimp production area could boost income of B.C. fishermen by $750,000.

The find, a few miles west of Namu in Queen Charlotte Sound, was made this spring by researchers aboard the G. B. Read, a vessel based at Pacific Biological Station in Nanaimo.

The area is said to be about 150 square miles in area and capable of yielding an annual harvest of five million pounds of shrimp.

Dr. W. E. Johnson, director of the biological station, said the find confirms earlier predictions by scientists and the industrial development branch of the Canadian Fisheries Service that appreciable new stocks might exist in the area.

The discovery came as the result of extensive experimental trawling in the area by the research vessel.

T. H. Butler, research scientist in charge of the station's program, located the major concentrations of the shrimp on the bottom, after trawling showed indications of substantial stocks.

He said the shrimp are located at a depth of between 90 and 110 fathoms and, he added, they are of good quality. He said they average about 100 shrimp to the pound.

"There have been substantial increases in shrimp stocks along this coast in the past three to five years, and I would be surprised if additional concentrations were not found in more northerly B.C. waters as well," Butler said.

Commercial interests have already expressed a keen interest in the new fishery. B.C. Packers, one of the major fish processors on the west coast, has installed new mechanical shrimp peelers at its Namu plant, to cope with the expected expansion of the fishery in that area.

Nanaimo tubber heads for toughest lap

NANAIMO — Nanaimo's champion tubber, Fred Maguire, is off and sailing again in his attempt to circle Vancouver Island, after trouble brought his voyage to a halt Saturday.

Maguire let Nanaimo last Thursday on what he hoped would be a 7 to 10-day journey around the Island in a racing bathtub.

Saturday, north of Campbell River, he reported the transom of his five-foot tub had broken and he would have to pull in until repairs could be made. He spent the night at a logging camp near Kelsey Bay, where he worked on his craft before setting out again Sunday.

The run Sunday to Port Hardy was the toughest part of the trip to date, he reported. He said he encounted 17-foot high waves.

"The tub is working all night now, but seasickness is our major problem, for both me and the crew of the escort boat," he said.

He said he was cold and tired as he prepared to set out Monday for what could be the most severe test of both man and boat yet. He expected to hit Cape Scott at the northern tip of the Island Monday noon and begin the long journey south.

Before he set out, Maguire said he was prepared for 30-foot waves on the western side of the Island.

It now appears almost certain the trip will take more than seven days and, with five days gone already, the trip could also go beyond the 10-day limit set by Maguire.

In his telephone report to Nanaimo Monday, he said he is still determined to comlete the journey.

But the weather might be Maguire's side.

Officials at Patricia Bay meteorological station Monday night reported calm winds and smooth waters off Bull Harbor which Maguire said would be his final landing spot before travelling around Cape Scott.

Winds at Cape Scott Monday were northwest at four-miles-an-hour with a low westerly swell on the water. Meteorologists said the calm conditions were expected to remain at least until Wednesday. The worst Maguire could expect, were moderate winds ranging from 15 to 20 miles-per-hour.

Ontario turnaround lifts Trudeau to power; NDP, Socreds cut back

Capital area: Tories pile big margins

T. C. (Tommy) Douglas beat back a strong Tory challenge to hold on to his Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding and become one of Vancouver Island's three incumbent MPs to be returned. But his majority was cut from 15,304 to 2,345 when 305 of 311 polls had been counted.

The others returned were Allan McKinnon, who easily held Victoria for the Conservatives, and Donald Munro, who was again returned as Conservative member for Esquimalt-Saanich.

The NDP loss came in Comox-Alberni which had been held for 17 of the past 22 years by Tom Barnett, who did not run again.

Liberal Hugh Anderson was leading with 13,547 votes with 300 polls out of 306 reporting. In second place with 12,544 votes was Conservative Alan Lazerte.

The NDP candidate, Donald Barker, ran third with 11,133 votes, and in last place was Communist Mark Mosher with 603. Earlier in the night the lead had gone back and forth between Anderson and Lazerte as various polls reported and at times it was reminiscent of the 1968 election when the Liberals won the seat by nine votes. However, Anderson finally went ahead in convincing numbers.

Anderson was elated by the result. In the 1972 election the Liberals had polled about 9,000 votes compared with about 17,000 for the NDP.

He said his showing proved the Liberal party "is far from being in the doldrums in this province that some people think it is."

In Victoria riding there was never any doubt about the result and Liberal challenger Frances Elford conceded defeat within an hour after polls closed at 8 p.m.

Final unofficial result showed McKinnon with 26,781 votes, a majority of 12,483 over Elford. He won the seat

Margaret Trudeau plants victory kiss on husband at Ottawa press conference

Lewis loses House seat

TORONTO — Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal party won the wars on the Ontario battlefield in Monday's general election and captured a majority government — a goal he desperately wanted.

Conservative ranks were badly shaken, and the New Democrats not only lost their leader, but about one-half their troops.

The revival of the Liberals in Ontario surprised many observers who had been predicting a neck-and-neck race in the traditional battleground. The Liberals had won 19 more Ontario seats than in October, 1972, bringing their provincial total to 55. Both the Conservatives and New Democrats suffered losses there.

The trend was apparent even before Ontario returns came in.

Then, as expected, they swept through their traditional fortress of Quebec and had enough seats to see them through the relatively Liberal-barren Prairies.

In British Columbia, where the New Democrats were being hammered by the voters, the Liberals got their majority.

The setback for the Conservatives and New Democrats sparked immediate speculation about the future of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, who now has led the party into three general elections. He came within an inch of the prime ministership in 1972 but after Monday's losses, he is almost certain to review his leadership.

He would not comment on that possibility.

"I will have to talk with officials of the caucus and leaders of the party," he said after learning the results.

The defeat of the 65-year-old Lewis might end his career in Parliament, which he first entered in 1963 after four unsuccessful attempts. But he said Monday night he would continue to fight for democratic socialism "so long as there's breath in me."

When the Liberal victory became apparent, Trudeau went before television cameras in Ottawa, thanked the people for bolstering his party, and promised that all his government's actions would be for the good of all regions. For the third time following a general election, he had to express disappointment about the low representation of Liberals from the Prairies.

Grits, Tories both gain

B.C. wallops NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party fell to a shattering defeat in B.C. in Monday's federal election as the Conservatives and Liberals each picked up seats.

With counting still proceeding, the Conservatives had won 13 of B.C.'s 23 seats, with the Liberals elected in seven seats. The NDP had only two candidates elected, one in Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands, where former national NDP leader Tommy Douglas won again.

The Conservatives won eight seats in 1972, while the Liberals won four in that election. The NDP led all parties in B.C. in 1972 with 11 victories.

Davis
. . . major defeat

Davis fell behind Conservative businessman Ron Huntington early in the counting and never picked up ground. The loss didn't come as a complete surprise, with political observers suggesting he was in trouble in the riding.

The Liberals brought in heavy firepower, with Prime Minister Trudeau and wife Margaret both addressing rallies in the affluent constituency. Davis had represented the riding since 1962 and in 1968, won by more than 20,000 votes, the largest plurality rolled up by any candidate in the country.

It was national NDP leader David Lewis who first raised the spectre of the NDP losing seats in B.C. because of the policies of Barrett's government and, no matter what the cause, it was obvious that the NDP was losing many seats.

One indicator was Vancouver East, the lunchpail riding which has never elected anyone except an NDP or CCF member in its history.

There, trade unionst Paddy Neale fell behind early to Liberal Art Lee, who hadn't even planned to run until drafted in desperation by the Liberals.

'Strong nation in unsure era'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday that Canada has elected a strong government in an uncertain world.

"Canada has come out of this election strong and confident in its future," the prime minister said.

"I'm very anxious to get on with the job."

The prime minister praised the election efforts of the three main opposition parties and expressed regret that David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, will not be in the new Parliament.

"Mr. Stanfield had a difficult task," he said referring to the Progressive Conservative leader's policy on income and price controls.

"He was putting a difficult proposition before the Canadian people and I admire his courage in having sustained that fight during two long months."

He said he was sorry so many good people had lost.

Referring to the poor Liberal showing in the western provinces the prime minister said that he renews his pledge that federal policies will be applied fairly in the West.

Tory leadership 'not yet an issue'

HALIFAX (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Monday he does not want to talk at present about whether he will stay on as leader of the Progressive Conservative party.

Stanfield looked glum and spoke in hushed tones to reporters at his campaign headquarters here after hearing the Liberal party was on its way to forming a majority government.

"I will have to talk with officials of the caucus and leaders of the party," he said when asked if he would stay on as leader.

But that's politics, says morose Lewis

UPI, CP

TORONTO — New Democratic Party leader David Lewis, whose party held the balance of power in the last parliament, went down to defeat in his home riding Monday at the hands of a political unknown.

Lewis could either resign, stay on as non-parliamentary leader or run for a seat vacated by another NDP member.

"I'm naturally disappointed . . . but that's what politics is about," he told reporters and supporters after it was clear he had been beaten.

Asked by reporters if he would take another member's seat, Lewis replied, "I will obviously have to consider it." As far as the party leadership was concerned, he said, "My own inclination is to say let someone else take it."

Lewis, who has worked for democratic socialism in and out of parliament for 40 years, was defeated in the Toronto riding of York South by Liberal Ursula Appolloni. She is a political newcomer who was not given much of a chance against the NDP leader, but was declared winner 50 minutes after the polls had closed.

Rejected by boss, Moncton man wins

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI) — Controversial Moncton Mayor Leonard Jones, who was rejected as a candidate by the Progressive Conservative party due to his anti-bilingualism stand, was elected to parliament Monday as an independent candidate.

Jones, who originally won the Conservative nomination in the riding of Moncton, was dumped as the party candidate by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

As mayor of Moncton, Jones had taken a strong stand against bilingualism, a move which won considerable support from anglophones in the area.

Prominent Personalities

Glorious past no guarantee for bright political future

Former cabinet ministers trying for a come-back went down to defeat in Monday's election; newspaper and television men, never having been short of exposure, were clobbered.

Being the grandson of a former prime minister wasn't any help and having been premier of Manitoba wasn't considered a qualification to become an MP by the voters.

Among the prominents who went down to defeat Monday was Michael Meighen, president of the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada and grandson of former Prime Minister Arthur Meighen.

Meighen was defeated by C. M. (Bud) Drury, president of the treasury board, who took the Montreal-Westmount riding for the sixth straight time.

Duff Roblin, former Conservative Premier of Manitoba, couldn't overcome his carpet-bagger stigma and was beaten by the incumbent Liberal Hugh Faulkner, secretary of state, who was re-elected in Peterborough, Ont.

Ron Brewer, a former Canadian Football League player, ran for the Conservatives in Hamilton East and was defeated by Labor Minister John Munro.

It appears that the scandal which followed Munro's admission last week that political patronage was a fact of life didn't hurt his chances for re-election.

It was a bad night for members of the Fourth Estate in the east.

Conservative incumbent Peter Reilly was defeated in Ottawa West by Liberal Lloyd Francis, the MP Reilly defeated in 1972. Reilly became somewhat of a national celebrity years ago for his participation in the CBC public affairs program This Hour Has Seven Days.

Ron Collister, former CBC parliamentary reporter, was defeated in the Toronto riding of York-Scarborough. Collister, who ran for the Conservatives, was beaten by Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury.

Lincoln Alexander, Conservative manpower and immigration critic, was re-elected in Hamilton East. Alexander is the only Negro in the House of Commons.

In Winnipeg North Centre, veteran MP Stanley Knowles, 66, long-time house whip for the NDP and expert on parliamentary procedure, was re-elected. He has held the seat since 1945 with the exception of four years.

Simma Holt, Vancouver Sun columnist, was elected for the liberals in Vancouver Kingsway in her first bid for political office.

Rev. Andy Hogan was elected in Cape Breton-East Richmond to become the first Roman Catholic priest ever elected to the House of Commons and the first third-party candidate elected to the Commons from the Atlantic provinces since 1962.

Leonard Jones, a former mayor, was elected as an independent in Moncton after being rejected as a candidate by the Progressive Conservative party, defeating four other candidates.

Allan MacEachen, Privy Council president, and Liberal House leader, was re-elected in Cape Breton Highlands-Canso.

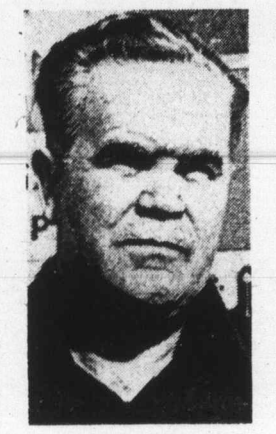

John Lundrigan, the PC member for Gander-Twillingate in the last house, was defeated in Bonavista-Trinity-Conception by Liberal David Rooney.

Ontario swung key votes in Grit sweep

By DOUG SMALL

TORONTO (CP) — Most of what Ontario took from Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals in the election of 1972, it returned Monday, setting up a return to majority government.

Liberals easily captured the bulk of the province's 88 seats in the general election, as they did in 1968, and once again cut into what was traditional Progressive Conservative support.

Voters returned all 10 of Trudeau's cabinet ministers from Ontario.

Party strategists had agreed before the election that the province would be the key to the election, and all major parties predicted gains.

Ontario Premier William Davis, a Conservative, said:

"I'm very disappointed. I think Mr. Stanfield did all any person could do to suggest solutions to the present problems."

Tories sweep Alberta

Prairies tell Grits no

EDMONTON (CP) — While much of Canada gave a resounding "yes" to Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberals in Monday's federal general election, the Prairies, as usual, said "no."

The Conservatives swept Alberta, just as they did in 1972, grabbing all 19 seats without much trouble.

They captured nine of Manitoba's 13 seats, a gain of one from the last election. The Liberals maintained their two seats while the New Democratic Party's representation dropped to two from three.

In Saskatchewan, the Conservatives won eight seats, one more than in 1972, while the NDP dropped to two from five.

The only Saskatchewan Liberals to win were Justice Minister Otto Lang in Saskatoon-Humboldt and Lang's former assistant, Ralph Goodale in Assiniboia.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker had no trouble winning re-election in Prince Albert. It was the 12th time Saskatchewan voters have sent him to the commons.

There were fewer than a handful of changes from 1972 in seats across the Prairies and none of these came as any great surprise.

In the Manitoba riding of Selkirk, persistent campaigner Dean Whiteway, who lost by 30 votes in 1972, won for the Conservatives against incumbent Doug Rowland of the NDP.

But there was no change in Alberta or the Northwest Territories.

Marcel Lambert, former speaker of the commons, won easy re-election in Edmonton West. Cattleman Bert Hargrave retained Medicine Hat against H. A. (Bud) Olson, former agriculture minister, who lost his seat in 1972.

Oilmen hope Grits will ease tax bill

CALGARY (CP) — Oil industry spokesmen said Monday night they hope the Liberal government will modify proposals which would increase the industry's tax bill by about $410 million annually.

Maurice Paulson, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, summed up the common viewpoint when he said:

"I hope there will be amendments to the May budget proposals. I think they (the Liberals) realize more money has to be spent on exploration."

The minority Liberal government was defeated in May over its budget, which included a provision to remove the federal tax-exempt status the oil industry enjoys on royalties — taxes on production — paid to provincial government.

A number of major petroleum companies cut back on exploration at the time, claiming the proposed changes would reduce the profit margin needed to continue exploring for new energy supplies.

Prior to the electon, Finance Minister John Turner said the budget proposals would be reintroduced if the Liberals were re-elected, as they were Monday.

John Poyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said he thinks it is in Canada's best interests to have a majority government.

"I am concerned with the treatment of the oil industry by the Liberal government, whose May budget had very damaging consequences," said Poyen. "I hope some of the budget proposals will be revamped and certain changes will be made to allow oil companies to make a fair level of profit."

Arne Neilsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., said he thinks some of the differences between the industry and Ottawa "will be ironed out" now that a majoritty government has been elected.

Hare wins race

HALIFAX (UPI) — In the end, the hare won in the race with the tortoise, and Conservative leader Robert Stanfield became a three-time loser.

In the final days of the campaign, Conservative strategists had compared it to the nursery tale race between the hare and the tortoise, with Stanfield in the role of the slow-starting but strong-finishing tortoise.

But with his party's failure to unseat the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau, the 60-year-old Stanfield not only lost his bid to govern the land, he probably also lost his party.

Conservatives said they knew the game was lost when Ontario turned against the Tories and backed the Liberals.

Stanfield felt part of the Ontario losses might have stemmed from voters wanting a majority government. "Perhaps they felt that with their strong base in Quebec, the Liberals had the best chance of forming a majority."

Another factor in the Ontario losses, he felt, was the tough campaign waged by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan in southern Ontario.

He also credited Trudeau for a vigorous personal campaign in the country generally.

He said he did not believe his party's defeat could be interpreted as a rejection of the wage and price controls he had single-mindedly advocated throughout the campaign.

Twelve successive wins

John D's record

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker reserved judgment Monday night on the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party in the wake of the defeat suffered by the party at the hands of the Liberals in the general election.

Diefenbaker, who had little trouble posting his 12th consecutive victory for the Conservatives in a federal election, declined to comment on the possible effect of the election on Robert Stanfield's leadership of the party. "It's too early to talk about those things."

The election of Diefenbaker in Prince Albert was never in doubt. He piled up a commanding early lead and finished the night with 5,200 more votes than the combined total of his three opponents.

While expressing disappointment at the national result, Diefenbaker said his win "represents the first time in Canadian history that someone has won 12 successive general elections." The 78-year-old Diefenbaker said the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier had 1 consecutive victories during his reign as prime minister.

"I'm disappointed at the national result, but after all, the people have spoken and I accept the verdict," said Diefenbaker.

"I do feel that the people of the prairie provinces took their stand, and strongly, against the Trudeau government because too often in the last few years the west has been forgotten."

Diefenbaker said he was "very sorry" to hear of the personal defeat of NDP leader David Lewis. "I always had for him that respect which I give to political opponents who I regard as sincere."

Davis loses to Tory

Less than two hours after the polls closed in B.C., the minister conceded defeat to Huntington, 53, who lost to Davis in the 1972 general federal election by 6,616 voter.

The North Vancouver businessman campaigned hard to topple the 58-year-old cabinet minister, who won his seat in 1968 by 21,000 votes — the highest majority of any candidate in Canada.

"I'm going to continue in politics," Davis said in an interview shortly after conceding defeat.

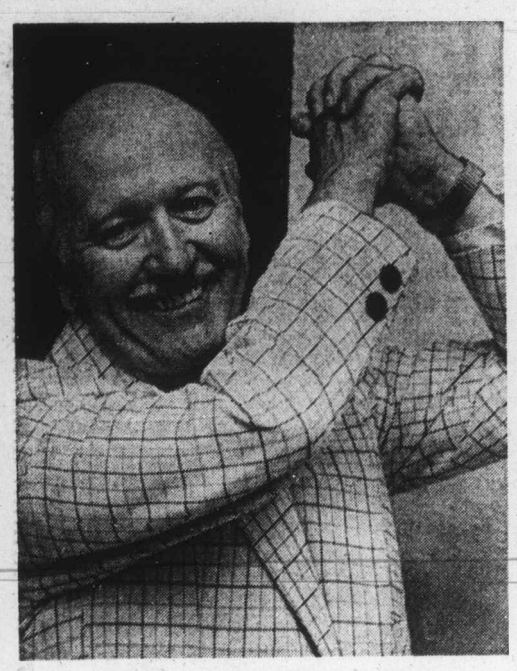

"I'm not quite sure what I'm going to be doing in the next month or two, but in the long run I'll be involved in political life."

Asked when he would run again for the Liberal party, Davis replied: "When I get a chance."

He attributed his personal defeat, in part, to a feeling the Liberal government had ignored B.C.

Davis said he thought government spending was another factor adding to his defeat in the high-income riding.

McKinnon gives victor's cheer

Victoria's Tory bastions unassailed

McKinnon wins in a canter

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

The election day that began as a spitter hurried to a predictable close in Victoria riding without so much as a sputter.

The spitter was the grey, drizzly weather which helped to swell the 4 p.m. traffic jams and which in the end held out promise of brighter things on the morrow.

The sputter that never was came in the fortunes of the NDP's Peter James, a young conservative-looking laboratory instructor from the University of Victoria, who failed to make the expected challenge from the left.

For the rest, former Oak Bay mayor Frances Elford conceded defeat gracefully, barely one hour after the start of ballot-counting, her second buffetting at the polls in less than eight months.

Quietly victorious, incumbent Tory Allan McKinnon spoke of his low-key campaign suiting a riding in which the majority of voters were on fixed incomes and naturally inclined to favor a no-nonsense policy of price controls to curb spiralling inflation.

McKinnon said he spent marginally more money on advertising than he did in the 1972 election ($17,000 plus as compared with slightly more than $15,000 in the 1972 election) — and typically he attributed this slight rise to inflation.

Interviewed by reporters at his Vancouver Street headquarters, he conceded that on a national scale the price-and wage-control policy advocated by Robert Stanfield and the Conservatives had been a tragic failure.

"I think it's a wonderful policy but an extremely poor plank as an election platform, it's an extremely hard thing to sell," he said.

However, McKinnon predicted that within six months, rampant inflation would force the victorious Liberals to pinch Tory party policy and start income and price controls. The bitter irony would be that the Conservatives would find themselves voting for measures they had initiated.

He spoke of his party leader as "one of the smartest" politicians as well as being a "real gentleman, a rare thing in politics." Again, he said, the pity was that the election might mean the end of Stanfield's career as Tory leader.

A long way behind in votes, Frances Elford warmed to the Liberal victory but confessed herself bemused as to how to get across the Liberal message to voters in Victoria.

A loser in the Oak Bay mayoralty race last November, she viewed her defeat to McKinnon philosophically, predicting she may run again federally although her municipal career had undoubtedly come to an end.

"Victoria has five or six times the national average of fixed income residents," she noted. "Obviously they pinned their hopes on wages and price controls."

She warned that the lack of a Victoria MP on the government side in Parliament could make things hard for the local person to approach the federal government "in small ways."

One of Mrs. Elford's hopes was that female MPs would increase their numbers from the five who were elected in 1973.

Mrs. Elford welcomed the defeat of NDP leader David Lewis at the hands of a woman Liberal. "It's wonderful — I wish I had her technique."

New Democrat Peter James said his third place finish behind the Liberals had nothing to do with any backlash of voters disenchanted with provincial NDP politics.

He speculated that what appeared to have happened Monday in Victoria was that "some of our support went to the Liberals in an attempt to oust the Conservatives."

In the 1972 federal election, the NDP's Flemming Hansen was only slightly more than 1,000 votes behind the Liberals' David Groos. This time the NDP total was about half that of the Liberals.

Trailing a long but cheerful way behind was 63-year-old Marxist-Leninist candidate David Danielson, a contract plumber, who at presstime was very hopeful of achieving his target of 200 revolutionary votes. "I feel a lot younger tonight than I have for quite a long time," he said.

Never a doubt about this one

Early returns established a trend that never wavered as Progressive Conservative Allan McKinnon swept poll after poll to win a second term as Victoria member of parliament.

In this election as last, Conservative strength came from all parts of the riding, with a 75.6 per cent turnout of voters putting Allan McKinnon on top in 282 of the 290 polls.

Although Mrs. Frances Elford, the Liberal, was on Oak Bay council for 10 years — and mayor until November — she did not place first in a single poll in that municipality. The eight polls she did win were scattered through Victoria West, James Bay and central Victoria.

New Democrat Peter James did not finish first in any poll, though he did manage second place in several parts of James Bay and Vic West, traditionally strong for the NDP.

The party's vote total was down by several thousand from its standing in 1972, and the decrease reverses a decade-old trend that had until now seen NDP support here rise consistently each election.

Tories' win low-key in Saanich

There was good news and bad news for supporters of the major political parties in Esquimalt-Saanich last night, and the atmosphere at party headquarters reflected the feelings.

Both Liberal and Conservative candidates kept their smiles firmly fixed as they watched personal fortunes offset by party results, and even Conservative Donald Munro's supporters were subdued in their reaction to his success.

Only at NDP headquarters was gloom firmly and thoroughly entrenched as Peter Smart, in his first election campaign, first saw his party leader go down to defeat, and then watched his portion of the riding vote slip far below the NDP share in previous years.

The traditional Tory riding remained firmly in the Conservative camp Monday night as voters swept their incumbent MP back to Ottawa.

Munro went into the lead as soon as the first poll was counted, and the results never changed as the riding's other 311 polls rolled in.

Early joy

The riding has been a Conservative stronghold since it was created in 1952. The only time it left the Tory camp was in 1968 when now-provincial Liberal leader David Anderson was elected on the crest of Trudeaumania. He held it for four years and in 1972 Munro was elected.

The voters Monday cast their ballots much as they have through the history of the riding.

Munro, happy to retain his seat, was unhappy about the national result.

He said Canadians will still get their price and income controls within one year, possibly before the end of 1974.

"It's simply that Trudeau was afraid to face the electorate with the issue," said Munro, "but he knows it has to come."

Noting reduced NDP support in his riding, Munro put it down to disenchantment with the provincial NDP, compounded by reaction to the party's support of Trudeau in the last Parliament.

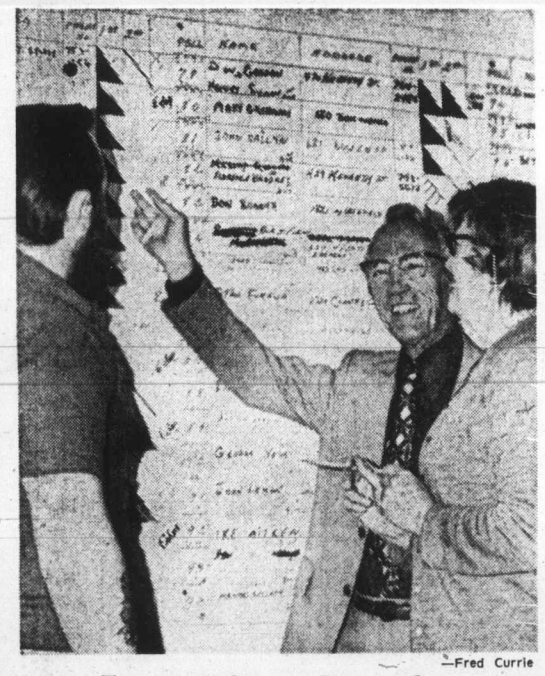

Anti-Tory

However, both Joy and Smart noted that NDP losses in the riding had been Liberal gains, and said the change had been more of an anti-Conservative vote than an anti-NDP vote.

Smart said it was difficult to tell if the NDP showing could be attributed to a backlash against the provincial NDP government.

"It's really hard to say if that is the case, or if it was simply a case of people assessing the chances of defeating the price and income control, and going with the party that had promised to avoid that course, and that had a chance of forming the government."

Provincial policies rejected, opposition claims

Chins up, Barrett tells supporters

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

The crushing defeat suffered by the NDP in British Columbia in Monday's general election triggered immediate reverberations on the provincial political scene.

Premier Barrett, disappointed by the results, called on NDP supporters not to be disheartened, while his opponents predicted an early demise of the provincial NDP.

Leaders of the provincial opposition parties were unanimous in attributing the voters' rejection of the federal NDP in B.C. to lack of confidence in Premier Barrett's provincial NDP government.

"If the premier believes in democracy and in the wishes of the people, he must call an election," said Bennett, in a statement from his Kelowna home.

The Barrett government, Bennett said, was "clearly repudiated" in B.C. The premier's brief campaign trip in the east, he added, had "spread the disaffection of his government."

It was obvious from the results of the federal elections, Bennett said, that Barrett's policies weren't wanted in B.C.

The outcome of the election, he said, was encouraging for the Social Credit Party.

"As you know, we stayed out of this election and our workers worked for all free-enterprise parties.

"It is clear our party will win the next provincial election," Bennett said.

Liberal Leader David Anderson, jubilant that Prime Minister Trudeau had won a majority, said he will aim for similar results in the next provincial election.

"We know now that we can take votes from the NDP. That's the way we will do it provincially and lick the NDP," Anderson said.

"We take on the NDP responsibly," he said, sideswiping the Socreds. "I can assure you that the Liberals will never align themselves with the Socreds or any other right-wing party."

Tory Leader Scott Wallace was not available for comment, but Hugh Curtis (PC-Saanich and the Islands) said the results of the federal election were the "worst possible storm warning for David Barrett."

The NDP's rejection in B.C. federally, Curtis said, was a sure sign of defeat for Barrett when he goes to the people next time.

He said it was obvious the voters had rejected Stanfield's wage and price-freeze proposal.

"But I think he has to be respected that he stood by it, even when there were signs that it didn't go over too well," he added.

In a television address, Barrett said it was clear the people of Canada wanted a majority government.

"But I'm proud of what the NDP has accomplished in supporting the Liberals, forcing that government to implement many of our policies," he said.

The vote, the premier added, was "indicative of a general disatisfaction with the political structure."

He said he hopes the Liberals will be able to lead the country adequately in the face of the serious problems that lie ahead.

"In terms of my own party, no one should be disheartened by the results. Our party has always gone up and down but has always existed," he said.

Asked whether he would consider the leadership of the national NDP should David Lewis, who was defeated in his own riding, resign, Barrett said: "I have no comment, I have a job here in B.C."

Douglas victory not all jubilant

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — T. C. Douglas was jubilant Monday when he was declared elected in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding.

Douglas said Lewis, his successor as party leader, "fought one of the best (NDP) campaigns ever and my heart bleeds for him."

He described Lewis' defeat in his riding of York South as "a great tragedy for Canada and the New Democratic Party."

The future of Lewis as party leader will be up to Lewis himself and the party's national committee, Douglas said.

He added that the NDP is "not short of bright young leadership candidates."

Douglas was clearly the winner when 262 of the 308 polls in the riding gave him 16,273 votes compared with his nearest rival, Donald Taylor, of Duncan, a Progressive Conservative, who had 14,386. Ray Kane, Liberal, had 8,419, and Ernest Knott, Communist, had 223.

Douglas said the over-all majority gained by the Liberals showed "the people wanted a majority government."

He said everyone had expected the Liberals to win heavily in Quebec, but he was surprised they had done so well in Ontario.

He speculated that people voted for the Liberals there because they "knew the Liberals would sweep Quebec and to get a majority they felt they had to vote Liberal."

Douglas, who had earlier said this would be his last effort for public office, said he may now have to revise his plans. He said this would depend on the NDP's situation "at the time."

"I don't want to run again," Douglas said. "In fact, I didn't want to run this time but the election was called too soon to get another candidate ready.

"That decision will now have to be made at a later date."

Sidney hackles rise at sewage takeover

Sidney will oppose any plans by the Capital Region to take over its sewage treatment plant.

The plant has been the subject of a "long series of communications" between the regional district and Sidney council since its construction a year and a half ago, Mayor Stanley Dear told council Monday.

Funded by the provincial and federal governments, the operation of the facility was granted to the regional district by the provincial government. The board then turned operational responsibilities over to Sidney municipality but retained supervision.

Dear described as unfair allegations by the region that municipal employees operating the treatment plant could not do it properly.

He said the board refused to allow the engineers responsible for the plant's construction to teach the proper methods of operation to municipal workers.

"I guess they hoped we would drown in our own sewage," Dear commented during the council meeting.

"They're railroading it through (the takeover of the sewage plant) regardless how we feel about it," Dear told aldermen. "I wouldn't object if it was done openly and honestly . . . instead of in this underhanded way of saying our men are incapable."

Operations responsibility of the plant was given to the municipality on a trial basis, Dear said, to be reviewed at a later date. Supervision was retained by the regional district because of Pollution Control Board regulations, he said.

Apartments pass despite protests

Over the protests of residents, Saanich council approved rezoning for two 49-unit apartment buildings at public hearings Monday night.

Ald. Mel Couvelier warned residents near the intersection of Quadra and McKenzie to "reconcile themselves to mounting development pressures."

Strongest objections to the rezoning from single-family residential came from John Green, of 1008 McKenzie, whose home will be "landlocked" by the two proposed developments.

Green said he had understood "it was not the policy of Saanich to isolate homes," but Couvelier said Green was landlocked because he had chosen not to sell to one of the developers.

One development, at 1011-1014 McKenzie, had been reduced from 69 to 49 units at the suggestion of Ald. William Noel. Only alderman to vote against the revised proposal was William Campbell.

The other development was proposed for 1.14 acres at 1002 McKenzie.
